Off the rails: Commuters see prices rise by 40% since 2008

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

COMMUTER groups have reacted with fury after cash-strapped rail users were told to brace themselves for the cost of their season tickets rocketing by hundreds of pounds in the new year.

Some coastal towns – including Folkestone, Deal, Dover and Ramsgate – will see prices hiked by more than six per cent, well over the national average.

And in Canterbury the 2013 annual season ticket price will cost £1,000 more than it did just five years ago – a staggering rise of nearly 40 per cent since 2008.

It has prompted an angry response from passenger watchdogs who had hoped Southeastern would proceed with caution when implementing their prices for the coming year, given the economic situation facing many households.

Chief executive of rail watchdog Passenger Focus, Anthony Smith, said: "Passengers will feel this pain. After years of above-inflation fare rises, fresh increases are piling pressure on already high fares. Government and the rail industry must work together to deliver on the welcome promise to get fare rises in line with inflation."

He advised rail users to buy their tickets before January 1 to save on the price rises.

Rail fares are traditionally based on the Retail Price Index (RPI) – which measures inflation – in July, plus three per cent. However, due to the squeeze on spending, the Government capped the rise for the next two years to RPI plus one per cent.

In July, the RPI stood at 3.2 per cent, meaning the average price rise should be 4.2 per cent.

Academic slams Leveson Report as MPs express concerns over findings

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

RECOMMENDATIONS by Lord Leveson are a 'clumsy way' of changing the way the press is regulated, according to a University of Kent professor.

The Leveson Report has outline plans to introduce a tougher form of self-regulation backed by legislation.

And a number of Kent MPs have already expressed concerns about the recommendations. The Prime Minister has also said he doesn't feel statute law was necessary to achieve the aims of the report.

An inquiry was called by David Cameron following the News of the World phone hacking scandal which saw the tabloid close.

Lord Leveson said that self-regulation of the press had to be more rigorous, and said the industry should stop "marking its own homework" after the failings of the Press Complaints Commission.

However, journalism professor at the University of Kent, Tim Luckhurst, said the recommendations were "very harsh" on newspapers - especially those which had never broken any ethical rules.

Prof Luckhurst said: "I welcome very little of what Leveson has done. I think Lord Justice Leveson is seeking to regulate all newspapers for the sins of the small minority.

"If they don't join, then they will be regulated by Ofcom. It offers no choice."

Some Kent MPs have spoken out against the recommendations, and have expressed concerns that the rules will restrict the rights of the press.

Folkestone & Hythe MP Damian Collins said: "I think he is right in his analysis of the media and how regulation of it has failed.

"The only worry is that it's backed by law. I think you can establish a new regulator without the Government being directly involved in it.

"A free press can be good or bad - but that's the purpose of having it free."

Sittingbourne & Sheppey MP Gordon Henderson added: "I can't get my head around that - it's either independent or it's self regulation."

However, North Thanet MP Sir Roger Gale says the recommendations are "sound", and is yet to be convinced by the Prime Minister's view that the recommendations should not be underpinned by Government legislation.

Sir Roger said: "I think it has struck a very good balance between the public and the freedom of the press.

"I think that any form of self-regulation has to be underpinned by legislation - but this doesn't mean it's state control.

"The problem with all of this has been that the Press Complaints Commission has been as useless as a chocolate kettle."

But one MP hails price rises as 'huge relief to passengers'

Rail operators are legally entitled to lift or drop their year-on-year rise from certain stations, as long as the average is achieved across their network.

All of which will be of little comfort to commuters in Deal, Ramsgate and Dover who will see price hikes of 6.46 per cent.

West Kent doesn't escape sharp rises either.

In Tonbridge, the cost goes up by 5.2 per cent and West Malling by 5.17 per cent. Gillingham sees an average increase of 4.2 per cent.

Canterbury commuters will fork out an extra £260 to £4,860 - a 5.9 per cent rise year-on-year.

Leader of rail union TSSA, Manual Cortes, also took a swipe at the increases.

He said: "Thousands of commuters across the south east will be paying close to £5,000 a year for their season tickets because of the government's unfair annual inflation-plus fare rises."

The cost of standard day return tickets will be unveiled during December.

However, Tunbridge Wells MP Greg Clarke said the rise could have been a lot worse had the Government not done more to regulate the prices.

The financial secretary to the Treasury added: "Last month, I met with the managing director of Southeastern and urged him not to increase rail fares from our local stations by more than the national average - especially at a time when many people are struggling financially.

"I am very pleased he listened to the concerns I raised. This announcement will be a huge relief to rail passengers."

He added that, in the past, local rail passengers have been hit by double-figure rail fare increases.

As a result of a campaign by Kent MPs, Southeastern reduced rail fare increases to around six per cent last year.

However, fellow Tory Gareth Johnson said Kent's commuters were feeling the pinch more than others, and that more could be done to help them.

The Dartford MP said: "I am pleased we have managed to limit it by inflation plus one per cent, but rail fares have hit commuters in the south east more than anyone else and it's something we need to work on."

Southeastern say its price increases do match the average national criteria.

A spokeswoman said: "Our average fare increase is 4.2 per cent - which is line with government policy.

Some will go up a little bit more than this, but many others will be less."

The middle-aged cat that's the face of a multi-million pound empire

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

HE may be "an old, saggy cloth cat, baggy, and a bit loose at the seams" but as Bagpuss hurtles towards his 40th anniversary, he still supports a multi-million pound industry.

And as the range of products featuring the timeless children's classic looks set to fill Christmas stockings up and down the country, yet again, there is no sign of our love affair with the pink cat slowing.

Just one of a number of companies which has a licence to make Bagpuss products says it continues to generate more than £1m each and every year through its branded product range. And that is just the tip of the iceberg.

Bagpuss was born in the workshops of creators Peter Firmin and Oliver Postgate in Blean, near Canterbury, and the outside of the shop in which the character lived, filmed in the village.

The duo and their Smallfilms firm created some of children's TV's best loved characters, including The Clangers, Ivor the Engine and Noggin the Nog.

Mr Firmin – Mr Postgate died in Broadstairs in 2008 – has a deal with London firm Coolabi which licenses the Bagpuss name for use on a wide range of products.

Existing deals include photographic greeting cards, adult nightwear and underwear, children's aprons and bags and, of course, cuddly toys and keyrings.

That deal runs until next year, when another big money deal looks set to be agreed.

A deal with the charity Asthma UK also allows for a range of Bagpuss products including pin badges, bookmarks and charm bracelets for sale at a wide range of outlets – they have helped raise £1 million over recent years.

Intex produces a range of items including boots, toys and neckwraps, which can be heated in a microwave before being used for a feeling of warmth.

Darren Ingram is sales and marketing director at the firm. He confirmed its share of the Bagpuss market is worth around the £1m a year mark.

He said: "Bagpuss is our biggest seller. About three months ago, we signed another three-year deal, and we are delighted to still be able to offer Bagpuss products."

Fran Huxley, licensing consultant at Coolabi said: "The continuing retail success is testament to the enduring popularity of the character."

The original Bagpuss is on display at Canterbury museum – and continues to draw in the crowds. It admits plans to mark the cat's 40th are already well advanced.

A spokesman explained: "We are already planning something special when Bagpuss turns 40, but details are still a big secret."

To mark his 39th birthday in February, there will be a special guest appearance by Mr Firmin and members of the Firmin and Postgate families.

Cautious optimism as train firm takes steps to keep us moving in the snow, but will it be enough?

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

AS forecasters predict an icy snap, train operators Southeastern need to prove they have "learnt their lesson" when dealing with wintry weather, according to a Kent MP.

Commuters have traditionally faced major problems with snow and ice, leading to huge delays and cancellations.

However, last year, the service appeared to cope well when put under pressure. It was a far cry from 2010 when services were decimated by snow and commuters complained of being left stranded with no information.

This week, Southeastern and Network Rail, which provides the rail infrastructure, outlined contingency plans for when the extreme weather strikes over the coming months and sought to reassure passengers fearing the worse.

The two firms met with MPs to brief them on how they intend to deal with the inevitable challenges.

The plans include:

- The introduction of two extra anti-freeze trains, designed to ease problems on the rails.

- Countywide tannoy announcements to improve communication with travellers.

- Analysing weather reports 72 hours in advance, with a contingency timetable ready to roll if ice

KEEP MOVING: Southeastern say they have learned from previous years and snow impact on services.

The strategy has been welcomed by Dartford MP Gareth Johnson, but he warned the proof was in the pudding. He said: "It's fair to say they are aware of their previous failures and are trying to improve their contingency plans from that."

"Southeastern fell down in their service and their communication in 2010 and they have got to learn their lessons from that."

"Although there was an improvement in the service last year, the weather was not as severe."

Asked if he thought the plans would be enough to curb any potential winter problems, he said: "we will only know then".

Earlier this year, Southeastern said train services in Kent were more vulnerable to ice and snow because its trains get their power from the rail tracks compared to overhead lines – something the high speed route benefits from.

As in previous years, the rail provider said it would hand out glowsticks and foil blankets to travellers if a train should breakdown and lose lighting, whilst the company has also bought three 4x4 vehicles

ON THE ROADS

A RURAL business watchdog has told motorists to prepare for the snow by fitting winter tyres in advance of any adverse weather.

The Country Land and Business Association (CLA) said that despite bad weather hitting the county in the last two years, not enough people prepare their cars until the white stuff starts to fall.

CLA regional director Robin Edwards said: "Winter tyres make sense for drivers in more remote rural areas where winter conditions are likely to be more severe for longer."

to assist broken down trains quicker.

Southeastern customer relations manager Alison Nolan said: "Heavy snow and ice represents a significant challenge for running trains on the third rail network."

"Whilst there is always likely to be disruption during severe winter weather, we believe the continual work we have done jointly with Network Rail should enable us to keep more services operating, help us recover more quickly from disruption and support our efforts to improve the quality of information that we provide to passengers."

BUSINESS

On the right track to develop opportunities

A MASSIVE advertising campaign was unveiled across London's transport network this week as part of a bid to boost economic regeneration across east Kent.

The Grow For It campaign, spearheaded by Kent County Council, was launched on Wednesday night and the fruits of the scheme could be seen by city commuters the following morning.

London buses bearing the project's logo hit the streets, while posters have been put up alongside the escalators at many of the busiest tube stations, including Kings Cross, Victoria, Covent Garden, Canary Wharf and Bank.

All extol the virtues of living and working in towns such as Canterbury, Folkestone, Dover, Margate and Ramsgate – rather than the grind of the daily commute.

Among the slogans is: "Swap your Oyster travel card for oysters on the beach".

Details of the campaign, run by London-based marketing company

Seven Hills, were revealed at the official launch of the regeneration project at the Dover Cruise

Terminal. It is seen as the latest piece in the jigsaw to revitalise the area, and will work in tandem with £35m recently awarded to the area by the Regional Growth Fund, which it is hoped will underpin the creation of 5,000 jobs.

KCC leader Paul Carter told the audience of around 400, which included councillors and business figures, that the high speed rail service – which has cut journey times from the area from more than an hour and 40 minutes to just 55 – is an opportunity "the rest of the world hasn't woken up to".

Cllr Carter then called for further investment, including a third Thames crossing and a new railway station at Manston to accommodate the fast trains.

Latest controversial airport design takes proposals out to sea

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

YET another ambitious proposal for a multi-billion pound airport terminal off the north Kent coast has emerged – this time linking a Thames Estuary airport with the international rail terminal at Ebbsfleet.

Dubbed the London Jubilee International Airport (LJIA), it has been put forward by a former advisor to London Mayor Boris Johnson.

Bridget Rosewell, former economic advisor to the Greater London Authority, says the designs would cost £49bn and be open for business by 2025. The airport would be equipped to handle up to 160m passengers a year.

A key difference to other designs already in the public domain is that it would look to utilise the rail hub at Ebbsfleet to form part of the terminal complex, before a high-speed rail service took passengers to the runways, built off the coast of Sheppey, Whitstable and Herne Bay.

It would boast five runways – with scope to extend to six.

However, the plans have already been slammed by a leading borough and county councillor who described them as “unworkable and unaffordable”.

Bryan Sweetland, Conservative member of Gravesham Borough Council and Kent County Council, said: “The Bridget Rosewell plan is just another in an increasing list of unworkable and unaffordable proposals that would cause untold environmental damage to the Thames Estuary. The proposal is clearly flawed and unworkable.”

But Ms Rosewell said she believes the idea will eliminate noise issues for residents and said the plans were not unaffordable.

She said: “People want to fly but do not want planes near them because they are noisy. The idea of putting the runway in the water solves the problem. If we are not connected to the rest of the world the UK economy will die. All infrastructure is expensive but without infrastructure we do not have an economy.”

Ms Rosewell added that wildlife would not be affected as there are already wind farms on the site.

GRAND DESIGNS

BRIDGET Rosewell's proposals come hot on the heels of a host of other widely publicised plans.

They include Lord Foster's plans for an airport which would sit on Grain and stretch onto reclaimed land in the estuary.

The other main contender is by designers Gensler, who propose a giant futuristic airport with four runways tethered to the seabed.

They all take their inspiration from an idea originally mooted by Boris Johnson and dubbed Boris Island, which would be sited in the estuary.

All proposals will go before an independent commission, headed up by Sir Howard Davies, which will examine options for the UK's aviation industry. It is expected to report back by the end of next year.

Other options to be discussed include expansion at Gatwick – strongly opposed by people living in west Kent who already suffer noise from planes flying over – and a third runway at Heathrow.

She said: “If the turbines can be there then we can put the airport there. It's not where there are lots of birds.”

“[We are] trying to get the planes away from the people with a minimum impact on the environment.”

However, a spokesman for CPRE Protect Kent said the airport was not needed.

He said: “We are not convinced that there is any need for any more air capacity in the south east. Even if there were, anything in the Thames Estuary would be abysmal.”

Kent County Council, Medway Council and surrounding borough and district councils are all opposed to the idea of a Thames Estuary airport.

IN THE SEA: The latest airport design to be put forward would be located off the coast of Sheppey, Whitstable and Herne Bay

Ukip foster parent row: KCC insist political views not a factor here

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

KENT County Council has categorically stated it would never remove foster children from the homes of Ukip supporters following uproar over a decision taken in Rotherham.

County Hall chiefs insisted political persuasion is not a factor in considering foster parents. Medway Council refused to comment.

Kent underlined the stance after it emerged officials at Labour-controlled Rotherham Council had recently taken three ethnic minority youngsters from the home of a couple that had been looking after them.

The reason, it is claimed, is because the couple back the UK Independence Party, which campaigns against an 'open door policy' on immigration, but has no racist agenda.

The council leader at Rotherham, Roger Stone, claimed it was a "very complex case". It has admitted it was a wrong decision, and a council statement said: "Membership of Ukip should not bar someone from fostering."

But the action has brought about wide condemnation. Education secretary Michael Gove has ordered a full inquiry.

The foster parents, in their 50s, are now demanding to know if they will be allowed to continue looking after children, and also want the council to clear their name. They can't be identified in order to protect the vulnerable children who have been in their care.

We asked both KCC and Medway Council for their policies on fostering criteria and specifically if political persuasion would be considered during selection.

Mairead MacNeil, director of specialist children's services at Kent County Council said: "Foster carers are assessed only on their ability to meet a variety of children's needs or an individual child's specific needs."

But a spokesman for Medway said: "This is not the sort of thing we would talk about."

Ukip leader Nigel Farage, who lives in Westerham, said: "I was very upset and very angry at hearing about this case."

"This couple has been fostering for many years and are very decent people. It must have been an awful shock to them and to the children."

"Politically, I am not surprised at all. This is typical of the sort of bigotry we get from the Labour Party and Labour-controlled councils."

"I want the couple pardoned, I want the children returned, and yes, heads should roll."

MP'S HUSBAND STEPS DOWN

MAIDSTONE MP Helen Grant has "lost the trust" of the electorate, according to her constituency assistant, after her husband resigned from her office this week.

Simon Grant stepped down after differences between his contract and other members of staff left the equalities minister in an "embarrassing position".

It was the latest blow for the Conservative MP, who has faced criticism for plans to sell her constituency office and an expenses claims for a London home – despite living in Reigate, just 19 miles from Westminster.

Mr Grant's contract, it emerged this week, entitled him to 26 weeks' sick pay – while other staff were told they could have just two.

It follows a row with constituency assistant Tony Williams who claimed Mrs Grant had altered his contract to reduce sick pay, uncovered when he needed treatment for a heart problem.

In a statement, Mr

Grant said he had resigned after telling his wife of the discrepancy nearly two months after it was identified by the Independent Parliamentary Standards Authority (IPSA).

Simon Grant said: "Failing to tell my wife... was an error of judgement which has put her in an embarrassing position through no fault of her own."

"I have gained nothing from the discrepancy itself which was a genuine oversight."

Mr Williams said this week: "She's lost the trust of the electorate."

A statement from Mrs Grant's office said: "His (Mr Grant's) contract was created from the IPSA's permanent staff template, not the template used for all of her other staff."

"The standard sick pay clause in Mr Grant's permanent contract was not amended - this was the case through oversight on his part rather than design."

PROFILE

Rising star who swapped sunshine and Beckham for non-league game

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

FOR the 300 or so faithful who regularly trudge through the turnstiles at Hythe Town's Reachfields Stadium to watch the non-league side in action, thoughts of glitz and glamour are a long way from their thoughts.

But for one of the Hythe players, fame is far from a stranger.

Not only has Taser Hassan trained with, and chatted to, England legend David Beckham in sun-soaked Los Angeles, but his father is a famous name on the big screen and the player himself is making an impact in the competitive world of fashion modelling.

Mr Hassan, who lives in Petts Wood, was given the chance of a lifetime when asked to try-out for LA Galaxy in America's Major League Soccer, last year.

While the trial ultimately proved unsuccessful, he did brush shoulders with the former Manchester United legend.

The 21-year-old explained: "I got to speak to and play a few sessions with him. For my first training day to be with David Beckham, who I have always looked up to and idolised, was amazing.

Picture: JOSEPH SINCLAIR

It was great. He was very committed and humble. He took the time to talk to me."

After the disappointment of America, Mr Hassan returned home and now plays for Hythe Town, combining his skills as

Picture: SIMON GILES

SKILLS: Footballer Taser Hassan is also carving out a successful modelling career an attacking midfielder, while pursuing his dreams of becoming an actor.

His father, Tamer, is a well-known face in the movie industry; famed for his hard-man roles in films like The Business alongside Danny Dyer (see right).

The aspiring star's first big screen movie, The Philosophers, is due to come out next year and focuses on 20 students, their teacher and their plans to reboot the human race in the event of a nuclear apocalypse.

He is also starring as Evren Anil in short film The Chocolate Wrapper based on a true story. Mr Anil, 23, was beaten to death for confronting antisocial behaviour after two youths threw a chocolate bar into the car he was in.

Despite his acting and fashion modelling career being on the up, Mr Hassan says he still worries about where he is heading: "I worry a lot. I am so driven to better myself. I am trying to get somewhere and I do not want to stop. I want it to keep going."

However, football is still important and he finds it hard to choose between the sport and acting.

Mr Hassan has played for Huddersfield and Portsmouth youth teams and can count former England goalkeeper David James as another famous face he has played alongside.

He said: "He doesn't talk much. But he throws the ball at 100 miles an hour and is the best keeper I have played with."

Being in the public eye has bought Mr Hassan his fair share of fans, something which is set to increase if his film debut is a success.

He even has a 'Team Taser Hassan' Twitter profile set up by his female following, he said: "I was chuffed, all my mates banter me all the time about it. They have pictures of me I haven't even seen before. It's surreal."

IN THE FAMILY

Picture: ANDRE ALMEIDA

TAMER Hassan, Taser's father, has made a name for himself with a string of roles in both the movies and TV – as well as a stint as co-chairman of Kent League football side Greenwich Borough.

His biggest movie roles have been in the Football Factory and The Business, as well as parts in Hollywood blockbuster Batman Begins and BBC soap EastEnders.

Taser has revealed he is in talks with his father and Danny Dyer to star in an upcoming movie called Player.

He said: "I have always wanted to get on screen with my Dad because I have grown up learning from him. It would be great. The way you see my father and Danny on screen is how you see them in real life."

CHOICES: The purpose of the public inquiry is to decide whether to allow planning permission to extend the current Hermitage Quarry onto land which is covered by the highly valued Oaken Wood

ENVIRONMENT

The battle for Oaken Wood

Conservation groups go head-to-head over controversial quarry plans

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

ENVIRONMENTAL groups have been left divided over plans which could see an ancient woodland make way for the extension of a ragstone quarry.

A public inquiry into the heavily disputed plans to lengthen the existing site into Oaken Wood in Maidstone began this week after more than 1,000 objections to the proposals were submitted to Kent County Council.

However, the plans to remove trees from the woodlands have divided environmental groups and the public alike.

Both the Woodland Trust and Kent Wildlife Trust are to speak against the plans at the inquiry, but the Kent branch of the Campaign to Protect Rural England, Protect Kent, says campaigners should look at the bigger picture.

Ragstone produced at the Kentish quarry has been used for buildings such as Westminster Abbey and the Tower of London, and Protect Kent says the end products contribute to the environment as much as the woodlands.

However, the Woodland Trust and Kent Wildlife Trust say the proposed development would destroy ancient woodland and a number of species which reside in the area. Some 32 acres of Oaken Wood could get the chop, which consists mostly of sweet chestnut coppice.

The plans to extend the existing ragstone quarry were submitted by the Gallagher Group back in 2010, and the application was approved by KCC in 2011, despite a large number of objections.

However, a public inquiry was called after the Woodland Trust and Kent Wildlife Trust requested the matter be addressed by the Secretary of State.

The company behind the proposals insists it will return the land to its current state once the production of ragstone has ceased.

Gallagher Group chief executive Nick Yandle said: "This application is good for Kent, good for local jobs and, with time, will see the doubling of the woodland footprint, from 33 hectares to 66 hectares, with indigenous species such as oak.

"The future well-being of some of the county's best-loved ancient buildings depends on this application being approved as many were constructed with, and are, preserved using Kentish ragstone."

The company also said the extension was necessary to meet demand for the material, although this is disputed by opponents.

The inquiry is ongoing.

FOR

Jamie Weir

Public relations manager of Protect Kent

CPRE Protect Kent wants the best for all of Kent, and indeed rural communities across England.

We regularly have to think about development from a strategic viewpoint, and we often have to deal with contentious proposals. This is one such proposal.

Having given this very careful consideration, we decided not to object to the extension of Hermitage Quarry, provided that conditions are imposed to ensure quarrying is carried out as sustainably as possible, and assurances are given regarding its reinstatement to woodland once the quarry is no longer operational.

Many of our country's most important heritage buildings, such as Westminster Abbey and the Tower of London, were constructed using Kentish ragstone, and their maintenance will require a reliable supply of replacement stone.

This is obviously both a sensitive and controversial application, but provided the appropriate conditions are met CPRE Protect Kent does not object to this proposal.

AGAINST

Sue Young

Head of conservation, policy and evidence at Kent Wildlife Trust

Once ancient woodland has been destroyed, it's gone forever. The natural value of the site lies not just in trees, but in the interdependent woodland animals, plants, fungi and soils that have developed together over hundreds of years, and this complexity cannot be replicated.

Oaken Wood supports many species of conservation importance; we will do our best to ensure Kent does not lose any more of its ancient woodland biodiversity.

Nikki Williams

Head of campaigning at the Woodland Trust

Oaken Wood is the biggest test for the future of ancient woodland since the National Planning Policy Framework came into play earlier this year.

To lose it would set a dangerous precedent. We are confident that the need for and benefits of the mineral extraction at Oaken Wood do not outweigh the loss of this irreplaceable ancient woodland and look forward to defending this precious wildlife habitat for the benefit of generations to come.

Rescued lions on the road to a purr-fect recovery

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

TWO majestic lions who suffered neglect at a French circus, are now fighting fit a little under a year after they were rescued by an animal park.

Brothers Clarence and Brutus were kept in a tiny cage and believed to have been whipped and physically abused before a French rescue centre took them in.

And from there they were transferred to Wingham Wildlife Park, near Canterbury.

The two four-year-old cross-breed lions arrived in January and have been carefully nurtured ever since.

Today they more resemble the kings of the jungle their reputation suggests – as well as proving a hit with visitors.

But they still bear the scars of their former lives.

Clarence and Brutus suffered terrible conditions at the French circus, kept in a cage only 21 feet long and subjected to physical abuse.

Clarence has been left with a scar on his right hip, believed to be from a whip, as well as an eye problem due to head trauma.

But despite their ordeal, the brothers, who turn five on Christmas Eve, have finally settled in to their new home and park staff are looking forward to seeing them progress.

FELINE GOOD: Clarence and Brutus are roaring back to full strength. Right, Brutus relaxes outside ward to seeing them progress.

Park owner Tony Binskin said: "Many zoos don't like to take on too many rescued animals, partly due to the higher costs involved and also the public perception if they do not realise what background they are from."

He explained visitors thought a parrot they had rescued with no feathers had plucked them out in the park's care, rather than making the good recovery the park was overseeing.

coverly the park was overseeing.

In their first few weeks at the park, the pair did not want to leave their indoor housing or walk further than the small space they were used to.

"It took them a long time to start using their whole enclosure, all they needed was a chance to settle down and to be surrounded by people who adored them," Mr Binskin explained.

Co-owner of the park, Jackie Bin-skin, said: "It has taken them a long time, but they now use their whole enclosure, and love to have a look around from their raised platform."

But rehoming two such large animals involves a lot of hard work and money, with food, healthcare and building an enclosure to pay for.

Fundraising events to support these needs include a Halloween walk which saw more than £2,000 raised.

Also helping with the fundraising was nine-year-old Shannon Watts, who organised a sponsored silence and raised more than £150.

She said: "I really like the lions and I adopted Clarence in August for my birthday. I wanted to do something extra to help look after him. Although he isn't mine to keep forever, whilst I am adopting him I want to raise money for them both."

MUSIC

It's only rock 'n' roll (but 50 years on we still like it)

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

IT was 52 years ago that Mick Jagger and Keith Richards bumped into each other at Dartford train station and rekindled a friendship which would result in the creation of one of the world's best loved rock bands.

And to mark the 50-year anniversary of the group's first live show at London's Marquee Club in 1962, the band hit the stage of the O2 Arena in Greenwich for two sell-out performances.

Their first UK show for five years took place last Sunday, with special guests during the two-and-a-half-hour performance including former band members Bill Wyman and Mick Taylor, as well as Mary J Blige. The second was on Thursday night.

Tickets for the two shows had attracted criticism, with prices starting at more than £100 and soaring into the thousands for those wanting hospitality packages.

During the first show, Mr Jagger, 69, quipped: "How is everyone in the cheap-seats? Oh, there aren't any."

In addition to the two London shows, the band are also performing two nights in New York.

A PASSION FOR SHOES

THESE boots aren't made for walking - but they are proving a big hit in Portugal, having been created by a lecturer from the University of the Creative Arts.

Anthony Heywood, head of sculpture at UCA Canterbury, has just returned from Lisbon, where he created the sculpture from 2,000 items of old footwear for the city's festival of culture.

The five metre long and three metre high boots were installed at Martim Moniz Square as the centrepiece of the Take a Walk project to encourage visitors to explore the city on foot.

Saw slices tendons

AN ENGINEERING company in Faversham has been fined for safety breaches after a factory worker severed tendons in his hands whilst using a metal-cutting circular saw.

BMM Weston Ltd in Brent Hill, was fined £2,400 and ordered to pay £1,985 in costs after worker Graham Beal suffered serious lacerations in his fingers after they came into contact with an unguarded blade.

Mr Beal, from Faversham, had been cutting and shaping a solid steel bar.

Church counts cost as bell gets swiped

A CHURCH bell, which has been ringing in a rural village for 431 years, has fallen silent after it was stolen from a 13th century building.

Villagers in Leaveland, near Faversham, are mourning the loss of the bronze bell, which has stood tall at the St Laurence Church since 1581, after it failed to ring before a service for the first time in centuries.

Church wardens said they only noticed the missing two-foot wide bell a number of days after it went missing, with a dent on the floor and broken ridge tiles the only sign that something was afoot.

It is believed the bell was wrenched out of the tower, before the thieves threw it 25ft to the ground.

Church warden Lyn Collins said: "It is very disappointing that this has happened - it will be much missed.

"You can't really put a price on it because it has been there so long. We will replace it, but we will have to fundraise first. We are looking to see whether we can find another old bell, but it's early days."

When chimed, the 50kg bell could be heard around the area.

HEALTH

GPs to offer superfast testing service at HIV hot spots in bid to halt rise in infection

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A 60-second test for HIV is being piloted in Bromley after a huge surge in those infected.

Health officials believe cases have risen 300 per cent in the last five years to over 500.

Now a new test that can be done at a doctor's surgery is being piloted in the Penge and north Beckenham areas, said to be HIV hotspots.

HIV experts say because the rise in numbers has been so dramatic, they fear one in four carriers may be completely unaware they are infected.

They said this means they are missing out on life-saving treatment and can consequently unknowingly infect others.

If HIV is detected early it can be treated, allowing those with HIV to live a normal life span. Late diagnosis is the biggest factor associated with HIV-related death in the UK.

WHAT IS HIV?

HIV (human immunodeficiency virus) attacks the body's immune system.

In late-stage HIV infection, also known as AIDS, the weakened immune system means the body is more vulnerable to life-threatening conditions such as pneumonia and cancer.

The virus is passed on through exchanging bodily fluids, most commonly through unprotected sex, sharing needles to inject drugs and birth or breastfeeding, when an infected mother can pass the virus to her baby.

The most common HIV symptoms are similar to flu and include fever, sore throat, body rash, tiredness, joint and muscle pain along with swollen glands.

Of the 6,630 new cases of HIV in 2009 in the UK, more than half (54 per cent) got infected through heterosexual sex, and 42 per cent through sex between men.

In 2010, around 91,500 people were living with HIV in the UK, a figure made up from 69,424 who were diagnosed with HIV and an estimate of just over 22,000 who were undiagnosed.

Anyone in the Bromley area concerned can contact the HIV Advice Hotline on 01689 866647 for further information about HIV and treatments.

their GP to refer them to the GUM (Genito-Urinary Medicine) clinic or local hospital for a test but this can take longer.

The spokesman added: "Partly, HIV rates are increasing because people get diagnosed too late and have already transmitted the infection.

"Using condoms is still the best protection where you do not know your partner's HIV status. Intravenous drug use is responsible for a very small proportion of new HIV infections; most are caused by unprotected heterosexual sex and the majority of the remainder by sex between men.

"Our message to the public is to be sure of their HIV status and get tested, especially if they are in a high risk group."

To mark World AIDS Day on December 1, health professionals in Bromley took to the streets this weekend to highlight HIV awareness and explain its confidential services.

And that's the reason for launching the confidential and instant finger prick test for HIV in selected GP practices.

A spokesman for NHS Bromley said: "It involves no pain, no needles and no hassle. Our Rapid HIV Test is a simple two-step process, giving accurate results in 60 seconds.

"We give one finger a very slight prick that may not even be noticed. A smear of blood is taken and in 60 seconds or less, there is a result. They can either leave right away, or stay and get any support needed."

The test is available to new patients aged 15 to 59 at the time of registration; the most at-risk sectors of society.

Patients with HIV-related symptoms can take the test along with those with identified risks and any individual who may be concerned about their health.

Blow to live animal export protesters after council lifts its temporary ban on the trade

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

A LEGAL bid to block live animal exports through the port of Ramsgate was dramatically dropped on Thursday.

Thanet District Council said it had taken the step to 'unilaterally lift its temporary ban on the movement of export with immediate effect' after taking legal advice.

It has now invited the transporters and owners of the Joline, the boat used to ship animals to the Continent, to drop their legal proceedings.

The High Court was due to hold a judicial review of the temporary ban on December 11.

A council statement said: "This follows legal advice which reveals that, in the eyes of the law, the basis on which the ban had originally been imposed could no longer be sustained."

"The decision also comes in the wake of news that Defra has been undertaking a review into the circumstances and procedures of the transportation of live animals following the incident in September, which saw over 40 animals slaughtered at the port. Although still under way, it is very unlikely that the review will require additional facilities to be provided at or by the port."

Cabinet member Michelle Fenner said: "Our hand has again been forced as we are duty bound to act in accordance with the law. We have to

CHOPPY WATERS: Efforts to block the live export trade came to a shuddering halt this week after the council dropped its legal case consider our absolute obligation to protect the public purse.

"As we've done everything in our power to get to this point, it is disappointing, however we have worked extremely hard in recent months and will continue to push the agencies involved in whatever legal way we can to ensure that the welfare of animals is protected."

Just this week, Dutch company Barco de Vapor BV, which owns the Joline, broke its silence to accuse the council of encouraging protestors to cause chaos when lorries of live animals are brought through the port.

The council strongly denies the claims.

It also said the local authority, which is against the trade, was wasting taxpayers' money on the legal proceedings.

Barco de Vapor BV is one of three Dutch companies to challenge the council's decision to prevent the trade.

John Onderwater, who runs Barco de Vapor BV, said: "Thanet District Council claims public money is wasted on policing our business."

"They are right, but as it is they themselves that instigate the necessity of police attendance, this situation must stop."

Speaking before the legal bid was stopped on Thursday, protestor Reg Bell said: "At no time has the council encouraged us to protest."

"However, we are very pleased the council has listened to us when we have given reasonable arguments and told them why we don't want this trade going through our town."

HISTORY

RAF pilot's diary offers unique insight into battle for the skies

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE diary of a young, heroic, Battle of Britain pilot, which recounts a frantic dogfight in the skies over Maidstone, has been published.

It describes the wartime career of George Barclay who survived being shot down three times and escaped from the Nazis in occupied France, but was sadly killed in action in North Africa.

Now, 70 years after his death, Battle of Britain Pilot: The Self-Portrait of an RAF Fighter Pilot and Escaper is thought to be the only record of its kind. It tells how the heroic Norfolk-born squadron leader took to the skies in the Hurricanes and Spitfires, and who describes being shot down for the first time as a "most novel experience".

The day-to-day log of the conflict, written against Ministry of Defence security rules, was undiscovered for years before being found by Barclay's family in a small parcel, along with his Distinguished Flying Cross.

It has been published by Haynes with the help of the pilot's younger brother Richard, 86, and historians who pieced together the unique story.

Barclay was just 20 when he was called up to fight against the Nazis in 1939, and trained as a fighter pilot. His diary was written on two exercise books filled with scraps of writing paper, with each page detailing his experiences and emotions as he fought for his country.

It finishes before the Allies secured victory as he was killed in action at the age of 22 as he commanded 238 Hurricane Squadron at El Alamein.

His first entry begins: "Yesterday evening we were told we were to move to North Weald, Essex, today, to relieve the war-weary and much shot up 56 Squadron."

Days later he was shot down, but managed to crash-land his aircraft.

Later the diary describes 12 British planes patrolling the skies over Maidstone – of which only seven returned. He wrote: "We went off just before tea by ourselves and climbing up to 23,000ft over Maidstone... I was leading yellow section and looking after the squadron's tail.

"The odds have been unbelievable (and we are all really very shak- en!). There are bombs and things falling around tonight and a terrific gun barrage. Has a blitz begun?"

Barclay was shot down for the second time on November 29 at 22,000ft, but chose not to open his parachute until at 2,000ft.

He recorded the incident: "I was shot down today – a most novel experience. As I fell out and down on my back one of my boots fell off, apparently to me falling upwards as I left it behind."

On September 20, 1941, the fighter pilot was downed for a third time after being 'jumped' by five Me 109 fighters as he flew over France in a Spitfire. He ended up in a French field where he turned his uniform inside out to hide the insignia, and pretended to be a farm worker as Nazis came looking.

Historian Humphrey Wynn, who edited the book, said: "As a document, it is as important as a personal account of any other great battle such as the diary of an Elizabethan seaman in the Armada or one of Nelson's officers at Trafalgar."

PADDY ON COCKLESHELL HEROES

IT WAS one of the most daring wartime missions ever, and even the men sent to destroy part of the German navy knew it was suicide to try.

Just two of the Cockleshell Heroes, including one from Kent, survived, and their bravery will be discussed at a talk by Lord Ashdown in Sandwich on Monday.

The evening will also raise cash for Help for Heroes, the organisation that cares for our modern day military victims.

Next Saturday will be the 70th anniversary of the Cockleshell Heroes raid, or Operation Frankton.

Ten Royal Marines were secretly dropped by submarine off the French coast. They then used kayaks to silently row up the Gironde River, to place limpet mines on enemy ships berthed at Bordeaux harbour. They had practised by launching from Margate and rowing to Deptford in canoes known as Cockles.

The raid was later immortalised in a Trevor Howard film.

Six German ships were damaged in the raid. Of the four men involved, only two returned safely; one of those was Kent-based Bill Sparks who was later awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

SPEAKER: Lord Ashdown

Mr Sparks and his colleague walked 107 miles across France to rendezvous with the Resistance. They were then smuggled across the Pyrenees on their journey home.

The staggering achievement of Marine Sparks prompted business owner Russ Timpson and three friends to re-enact the walk, raising £30,000 for Help for Heroes.

He said: "Now Lord Ashdown, who has written a book on the subject, will be giving a talk about the raid at a fundraising event at Sir Roger Manwood's School."

The event starts at 7pm and tickets costing £7 or £5 are available from the school office.

EVENT

Woggle-tastic! Scouts set to gather from around the world for jamboree party

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MORE than 3,000 scouts and guides from around the world will be dib-dibing next year for the Kent International Jamboree.

Staged at the Kent County Show Ground in Detling, representatives from 30 nations have confirmed their attendance, with some travelling from as far as Japan, Sri Lanka, Lagos and Denmark.

It will be the fifth event of its kind, with the event taking place every four years, for what is billed as a week of fun, adventure and international friendship running from July 27 to August 3.

Jamboree director Andy Trill said: "We're excited to be welcoming thousands of scouts and guides next summer, something that wouldn't be possible without the dedication of our volunteers. We will spend thousands of hours organising this event to ensure it's a success.

"Our scouts and guides will be able to meet thousands of other young people from different cultures and countries as well as take on seven different activity zones together."

And another organiser, Chris Frankland, added: "Jamborees are a fantastic opportunity for young people to meet others from literally all around the world.

"We're really looking forward to next year and the return of some of our favourite activities.

"Many of the international contingents will be staying in Kent after the week-long jamboree, taking in some of the local scouts' hospitality before departing home.

"Jamborees are an international celebration for young people involved in scouting and guiding. The spirit of a jamboree involves making friends while sharing new adventures. There will be an active and energetic programme that will allow young people to grow in confidence.

"Our philosophy has always been about offering a jamboree experience born from our scouting and guiding traditions and providing a camp with both an intimate feel and the chance to have fun."

Mr Frankland added: "Just like the Olympics and World Cup, it takes place every four years and we have high hopes that in 2013 it will be our best event yet. Scouts and guides will have the opportunity to try more than 100 different activities in the programme zones, including climbing, abseiling and water events."

FRIENDS: Scouts and guides from all over the world are set to attend the jamboree

AN INSPIRATIONAL AMBASSADOR

WORLD traveller Phil Packer MBE has been unveiled as the Scout Association's newest ambassador.

The inspirational figure suffered a severe spinal injury while on active duty as a serviceman in Iraq and was told he would never walk again. But he overcame his problems to inspire others with personal challenges including parachuting, rowing, mountain climbing and several marathons.

He even rowed across the Channel less than a year after sustaining the injuries.

Mr Packer has spent this year walking the whole of the UK, with scouts joining him at many points in his journey, as part of his own charity challenge. It included a visit to Kent.

Stunning memorial photo a star attraction at fundraising auction

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

THIS stunning photo, capturing a coastal war memorial, has been auctioned off to raise vital funds towards the Battle of Britain Memorial Trust.

Snapped in Capel-le-Ferne, it captures the striking image of the stone seated airman apparently staring into the night sky.

The statue sits above the National Memorial to the Few which lists the names of all those who took part in the Battle of Britain, one of the most crucial parts of the war as the Allies battled German aircraft over Kent and the English Channel.

This image was caught by photographer Greg Esson, who took the picture in March.

He said he wanted to combine his love of astronomy and photography for the charity, which is looking to raise millions to build a new visitor centre.

The picture of the airman

MEMORIAL:

statue raised £300 when auctioned at the charity's gala dinner.

A delighted Mr Esson explained: "I wanted to capture a close astronomical alignment of Venus, Jupiter and the crescent of the Moon.

"I felt I needed an unusual foreground subject to enhance the look of the pictures, and so I chose the National Memorial to the Few at Capel-le-Ferne.

"This is a really worthwhile cause and the pictures offer an interesting view of the memorial with the night sky in the background."

The photograph was signed by astronomer and TV presenter Sir Patrick Moore and the Sky at Night team.

The Battle of Britain Memorial Trust is looking to raise a total of £3m towards a new visitor centre.

To be called The Wing, it will tell the story of the military campaign.

Trust chairman, Sir Richard Hunting CBE, said: "Greg's photographs are stunning and we are delighted that he has been so generous in allowing the trust to benefit from his skills and his vision."

Scholar on a mission to raise profile of the endangered 'walking pine cone'

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

COVERED from head to toe in scales, this creature may look like it belongs with the dinosaurs.

And although some call it ugly, one scholar is on a mission to raise awareness of the endangered pangolin, nicknamed the 'walking pine cone'. He wants to ensure it doesn't follow the dinosaurs onto the extinction list.

Dan Challender is trying to make the odd-looking pangolin as popular as the much-loved panda and insists the creature has just as much to offer.

The pangolin is at serious risk of extinction as its scales are highly valued in Chinese medicine and its meat is considered a delicacy.

It is the only mammal to be covered in keratin scales and is found in parts of Africa and Asia. Keratin is a key component in the structure of hair and nails.

The scales are believed to cure ailments including swelling and skin conditions in some cultures.

Dried scales are roasted and

AT RISK: This pangolin is part of the Carnivore and Pangolin Conservation Program in Vietnam, but it is not known how many remain in the wild cooked in oil or vinegar and eaten.

University of Kent PhD student, Mr Challender, has been studying the animals as part of his doctorate and hopes to make people more aware of them.

And he hopes their unusual appearance will be the key to getting people to help their cause.

Mr Challender said: "They are really cool creatures. They are endearing, that's what drew me to them. They are really inquisitive and a lot like a dinosaur."

"We want to get them into people's consciousness. If you think about people's initial reaction to pandas and lions it makes them melt in the mouth."

"The more people who are exposed to pangolins the more people will find them endearing."

Mr Challender, 29, and based at the Canterbury campus, added that killing them for food is a 'needless' act and if the population dies out it could have an impact on the ecosystem, as pangolins eat ants and termites. It is not known how many are left in the wild.

He said the animals are seen as a status symbol and that in China and Vietnam scales are sold for more than US$500 per kg. The meat is sold at around US$300 in restaurants.

Mr Challender said: "Killing them is needless because it's not a need it's more of a want. It's a luxury."

EMPLOYMENT

Call centre rings in 150 new jobs as it prepares for the launch of NHS 111 phonenumber

A MAJOR call centre to handle a new non-emergency NHS phonenumber is to open in Ashford – creating more than 150 much-needed jobs.

The South East Coast Ambulance Service NHS Foundation Trust (SECAmb) has signed a deal with Harmoni, the largest provider of primary care services in the UK, to provide the service across Kent, Surrey and Sussex.

As part of the plans, one of two new call centres will be based on the town's Orbital Park.

The freshly created full and part-time jobs include roles for registered nurses and paramedics in addition to roles where training will be provided.

A spokesman explained: "The 111 number, which begins across SECAmb's region in March 2013, is designed to make it easier for members of the public to access a range of healthcare services such as dentistry, out-of-hours' doctor services or emergency care through transfer to the 999 system if their condition requires an ambulance.

OPPORTUNITY: The new call centre will play a key role in the roll out of the non-emergency NHS 111 phone service next year.

"It will also drive improvements in the way that the wider NHS delivers care."

The 111 service will be a round-the-clock service, 365-days-a-year.

It has already been rolled out in a variety of areas across the UK, including parts of London.

It will be free to call from landlines and mobiles.

Unlike standard out of hours' services where you are required to wait for a GP or a nurse to call back, an assessment will be made at the first point of contact.

The spokesman added: "In future if people need to contact the NHS for urgent care there will only be three numbers: 999 for life-threatening emergencies, their GP surgery or 111."

KENT REMEMBERED

BACK IN TIME: Authors Paul Wells and Jeff Howes with the book which launched last weekend

Exploring rich history of gateway to the UK

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

FOR centuries, Dover has been Britain's frontline.

Its majestic white cliffs rising from the murky waters of the English Channel have inspired generation after generation; a potent symbol of the beginning, or end, of the British Isles.

On a clear day, you can stand and peer out to sea and quite clearly make out the French coast, a little over 20 miles away.

As a result of its geography, it is traditionally accepted as the frontline whether it be for invading forces or, as is more often the case in the modern era, for the thousands of tourists who use it as the entry point into the UK.

It is not hard to imagine, as a result, the rich history in which the town is steeped.

Now a pair of local authors and historians have completed their second book on the history of the port.

Paul Wells and Jeff Howe's Dover Then and Now is their second title published by History Press, based on the events that have affected the town.

Their first effort, Dover Past and Present, was released three years ago.

The new book features a set of unique black and white photographs of a Dover long forgotten, in addition to modern day photos showing how the area has changed over the last century.

With full insight into the BOOK: Focuses on town's past area provided, they are hoping the hardback book provides a vital addition to any local historian's library.

Mr Howe is a founding member of the Western Heights Preservation Society and Mr Wells is responsible for organising the open days at the Drop Redoubt Fort twice a year.

He is also currently studying as a history undergraduate at the University of Sussex, and Mr Wells is treasurer of the preservation society.

Local government officer Mr Wells said: "Between us, we have over 40 years of interest in military Dover, and the draw of the town has extended our interest even further."

"With over 3,000 years of history extending from the Bronze Age boat, through the Roman era, Napoleonic and Victorian defences and the development of the harbour there's always something new to discover."

"For over 10 years we have led illustrated guided walks for the White Cliffs Countryside Partnership and for English Heritage round the town and surrounding area.

"Our books are an opportunity for us to share our collections and vast amount of local knowledge and enthusiasm with the locals and beyond."

Mr Wells added: "We wrote our first book in 2009 following the success of a friend's similar book on Ramsgate. We had led guided walks in and around Dover for over 10 years and there is nothing like standing in the exact location of a photo taken 100 years ago and seeing the difference today, and it seemed a natural progression to convert this into a book."

"There was a gap in the market for this style of book and we took the opportunity to be able to share some of our collection with the public rather than it gathering dust on our bookshelves."

"Following the sell-out of the first volume, the publishers, History Press, approached us earlier this year proposing a re-vamp ready for their new colour hardback range, however rather than re-release the same images we took the opportunity to do a totally new book with new photographs."

The pair are now working on new projects, including more books.

Dover Then and Now went on sale last Saturday, with a special launch event at Dover Museum's education room.

The book is on sale for £12.99.

OPINION

Why your high street needs you

Jo James, chief executive of Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce, highlights why independent traders rely on you spend this Yuletide

FIRST, let's get one thing out of the way – what, precisely, is a trader?

"A person who engages in trade" is not particularly helpful. We seem to use the word trade with a variety of meanings: international trade, trade and industry, a person's trade...

Most dictionaries, however, seem to be in agreement about the primary meaning of trade: the buying and selling of goods or services.

From that perspective, the importance of Christmas to traders becomes immediately obvious. Whatever else Christmas is, it is certainly a bean-feast of buying and selling.

The simple fact is that the Christmas period represents, without doubt, the most important time of the year for retail businesses, and in many cases it can be not only the icing on the cake, but that which keeps the business viable.

Outside retail, if I can briefly digress, the Christmas period can be a bit of a double-edged sword. It can be intrusive and disruptive to the pattern of business, and cause severe administrative problems.

But let's face it, we are all consumers of one kind or another and as individuals we contribute to the Christmas retail situation, so we are all in this together. Besides, outside retail is a different story.

This year is especially crucial. The economic situation is giving rise to severe problems in the retail world, as evinced by perpetually low trading statistics and the failure not only of independent high street traders, but of national chains that have been household names for many years.

People simply do not have money to spend; even those that may have some kind of buffer against austerity are reluctant to use it, fearing things might get even worse.

Independent traders especially are finding times hard.

Large corporations have reserves that can be brought into play to cushion thin times; they buy in huge amounts, they can source their supplies from a vast market, and they have immense power to pressure beneficial terms.

The independent trader has no such advantages.

Even so, the supermarkets are lobbying for longer Sunday opening hours over the Christmas period to maximise their potential sales. If the supermarkets feel the need for that, imagine how the independent traders must be feeling.

Is there anything that we can do about it all?

The obvious answer is to spend lots and lots over the Christmas period.

Fine in an ideal world, but we are not in one at present. So it has to be a matter of spending what we do in a judicious way

Spend as much as you can wisely... including at local shops which need your support that spreads the largesse as far as possible.

We all want to retain as much choice as possible, in whatever we do. The deeper into austerity we go, the more threat there is to local independent traders who offer a different shopping experience to that of the corporations and multi-nationals.

Don't get me wrong, I think the supermarkets and online outlets have an important part to play in the overall scheme of things. But local independents often buy from local independent sources, and both are paramount to the culture and environment of the communities in which we live.

Spend as much as we can, spend it wisely, and spend it at a variety of outlets, including our local shops which need our support. That way, we are more likely to retain the high streets and communities which we hold so dear.

The generational slip of protecting against HIV

FOR a certain generation, the threat of HIV and AIDS was one which curtailed behaviour and sent a shiver down the spine.

It was a virus which threatened to kill so many, and straight or gay, sex suddenly became an activity which could, quite literally, be the death of you.

But as the publicity died down, it would appear cases started to rise. The situation in Bromley we report on this week is one which should remind us all of the very real dangers of assuming if we don't think about it, it can't hurt us.

It is World AIDS Day this weekend. We should use it to teach the younger generation it's always better to be safe than sorry.

They deserve better

THERE is always a delicious irony that the announcement of the annual increase in rail fares comes just a few weeks before we're blanketed in snow and the whole network grinds to a halt.

Now, more than ever, commuters deserve the very best service possible, after all, they certainly pay enough.

Did we really have faith?

YOUR KoS front page headline last week asked 'Are we losing faith?'. In fact, the majority have never really had faith.

In the past, the non-believing majority feared to speak out because of the power of the Church. We now live in a freer society where people can openly express their views.

Regrettably, due to the control the Church has over schools, some people continue to pretend to be church-goers in order to get their children into school.

David Burgess, Hawkhurst

Church should be answerable

I FOUND last week's story, 'Are we losing faith?' excellent, excepting that it promulgated the often held belief that those bereaved arranging a funeral have just two choices: one of their faith, however tenuous that may be; or a humanist ceremony, which forbids mention of a deity.

This is simply not the case, but it's a wonder to me, given the sometimes entrenched views of many funeral directors – essentially the 'gatekeepers' of funeral services – that you have managed to unearth that there is a choice at all.

There is a third way; civil funeral ceremonies.

Many of the families I see have turned their faces away not necessarily from God, but from established churches.

This is hardly surprising given the horror stories I have heard over the 170 services I have now given.

Some let me know the member of clergy leading a previous ceremony would not allow contributions from family or friends; called their deceased family member by the wrong name; and dealt with what brief eulogy there was to be via a telephone call.

How utterly disgraceful and unspeakably wretched for the poor families involved.

Established churches have little defence when they allow clergy to continue offering such a shoddy service for a not insubstantial sum.

From January 2013, it will cost a family around £180 to have a Church of England minister conduct a ceremony.

This is an increase of around £50 on 2012 fees.

Given that we are in a period of almost uncharted austerity, can the General Synod really believe it is in touch with the common man?

Stories such as yours can only encourage people into talking more about death; the last taboo.

Airport facts – not this fiction

I HAVE yet to make my mind up whether I am in favour of an airport hub in the Thames Estuary area or not.

The reality is there has yet to be sufficient detailed analysis of the pros and cons for me to do so.

That, however, has not stopped local politicians such as Rehman Chishti (Opinion, November 25) coming out strongly against the proposal.

What is particularly worrying, particularly for a politician who has ambitions of higher office, is the lack of even a basic grasp of local economics.

Mr Chishti argues that as the number of jobs created by a new airport exceeds current unemployment in Kent and Medway this would result in an influx of new arrivals.

He overlooks the fact that a significant proportion of Kent and Medway's working population currently commutes out of the county as insufficient jobs exist locally.

Many of these commuters would welcome the opportunity to work locally and by doing so would reduce congestion on transport routes into London.

Those same transport routes could attract workers into Kent, taking advantage of the lower costs and congestion enjoyed when reverse commuting, without any need to move to Kent.

Clearly some new housing would be required, but there is more than enough capacity in sites already allocated across Kent, Medway, south Essex and east London. They won't all want to live in Medway.

Mr Chishti also, rather oddly, argues against more infrastructure, schools and hospitals, things that his administration at Medway Council argued strongly for when faced with the Thames Gateway growth plans along with a persistent 'jobs before housing' mantra.

Of course there are many environmental, funding and other challenges to building an airport in the Thames Estuary and ultimately these might well outweigh any economic benefits, but at least let us have a proper debate.

The final decision will not be made by local politicians, but it is for precisely that reason that our local councils should jointly be assessing the true economic impact.

This will enable them firstly to present an evidence-based argument against, if that is the conclusion, and secondly to ensure the region is best prepared to maximise the benefits should it ultimately happen.

The current, ill informed, knee-jerk, head-in-the-sand reaction by most local politicians serves neither those who are for, against or undecided.

Mark Bradbury
Former head of economic development at Ashford Borough Council, head of Chatham Development at Medway Renaissance and deputy director of development at London Thames Gateway Development Corporation

This 'barbaric' trade must end

I AM writing in case some of your readers are not aware that live exports of sheep and calves continue to be exported from Ramsgate.

It is often the case the calves are only 14-days-old therefore they are not even weaned.

This cheap, vile trade takes place every week from the Port of Ramsgate, with most weeks there being two sailings.

This may be deemed a legal trade, but it is not being conducted in a lawful manner.

While Defra's animal health inspectors only carry out the minimum amount of checks, the RSPCA inspectors were the ones who carried out thorough checks and found animal welfare violations, but since the reopening of the live exports on October 16, the RSPCA are no longer allowed to carry out inspections, they are only permitted to make notes and take photographs.

Come and see the reality of live animal exports, take a look at Compassion In World Farming, the RSPCA and Kent Action Against Live Exports websites, find out the facts then make your decision. There is no place for this barbaric 'trade' in the 21st century.

KYCC launches scheme to boost youth job hopes

THE Kent Youth County Council (KYCC) has launched what it is calling a "revolutionary" scheme to combat falling youth employment by creating more and better job opportunities for young people in Kent.

The KYCC, part of Kent County Council, provides a platform for young people to have a voice on issues impacting on the county and those which have an impact on the younger generation.

It has elected representatives to voice the opinion of those between the ages of 11-18.

Previous successes include the introduction of the Kent Freedom Pass, which allows unlimited travel around Kent for a year at the cost of £100.

Now it is tackling the issue of employment opportunities.

After speaking with hundreds of young people in Kent, the KYCC has written a 'Youth Employment Code' which has brought in, for the first time, an under-16 minimum wage, as well as changes to working hours, health and safety, apprenticeships, redundancies and vacancies.

Leader of the scheme, and KYCC member for Canterbury, Nabhan Malik, aged 15, said: "This scheme is a giant step forward for young people. For the first time, young people and the employers themselves are on the same page and moving forward, together."

"The possibilities are endless."

The event was launched last Friday at a special event held at Kent County Council's headquarters at County Hall in Maidstone.

Hopes high as bid for technical college goes back to the DofE

AFTER months of preparation, an official bid has been submitted to the Government in the hope of securing a university technical college in Medway.

It is the second bid submitted in the space of a year. An initial application received positive feedback but was unsuccessful.

This time hopes are the proposal for the college, billed as a new concept in secondary education, will receive a warmer reception from the Department of Education.

If successful, Medway's UTC will specialise in engineering and construction, traditionally at the heart of Medway's economy, and would be sponsored by the University of Greenwich, MidKent College, Medway Council and local employers.

Offering 14-19-year-olds a mixture of practical and academic education and training, university technical colleges are supported by a university, a further education college and local employers who will create projects and training for the students to participate in.

Professor Alan Reed, chair of the Medway UTC Partnership, said: "A successful outcome would bring a third option to secondary education, as well as a lasting legacy, to Medway and the wider sub-region."

Over the past few months, more than 800 people across Medway and Kent have been asked what they think of the idea, and an overwhelming majority back it.

The Department for Education will now consider the submission, with panel interviews set to take place between January 21 and February 6 next year, before an official decision is made in March 2013.

If successful, work to get the college up and running will get under way almost straight away, with plans to recruit a principal designate to lead the school by December next year, in readiness for opening in September 2014.

Although a site has not yet been confirmed, it is understood the preferred option would be an unused building at Brompton Barracks.

Principal of MidKent College, Sue McLeod, said: "We believe Medway's economy would benefit greatly from having a UTC, and we hope the Department for Education will agree with us."

"A UTC will enable a degree of specialisation prior to age 16 that is currently unavailable and which will re-engage and enthuse students."

SKILLED: A UTC would provide a vital boost

Medway Council's portfolio holder for children's services, Les Wicks, said: "Medway has a rich history of construction and engineering. This will not only continue this tradition, but also equip a new generation with first class technical skills that will help them pursue careers at all levels."

UCA looks its best ahead of it unveiling fashion retail course

A FASHION course is launching at the University for the Creative Arts (UCA) at Rochester.

The three-year degree in BA (Hons) fashion retail management will begin in September 2013 with applications open now.

The course will prepare students for a career in managing a wide-range of fashion outlets; from high street brands and department stores, to independent boutiques and online opportunities.

It will be based at UCA's fashion campus at Rochester which has prepared global fashion icons Karen Millen and Zandra Rhodes, among many others, for their worldwide success.

Thomass Atkinson, head of fashion at UCA, said: "The degree is designed to develop and produce effective leadership skills among students, while at the same time nurturing a strategic understanding of the consumer and drivers of the demand chain to create specialist fashion managers for the industry.

"Students will be prepared to work for any size of retail operation and across all channels of the consumer shopping journey - whether it's in-store or through the web, mobile and social networking devices - in an analytic, strategic, targeted and forward thinking way."

Dr Simon Ofield-Kerr, UCA vice-chancellor, said: "We believe fashion retail management not only complements our current portfolio perfectly but also completes the entire fashion cycle: from design, to manufacture, marketing and promotion to the sophisticated area of fashion retail."

Academy's big partnership

THE Bishop of Rochester Academy in Chatham has announced its first Academy Partnership - with global logistics company, Kuehne-Nagel.

Kuehne & Nagel is one of the largest logistics organisations in the world, managing the movement and storage of goods for household names such as Rolls-Royce, Honda, British Airways, B&Q, Waitrose, Sainsbury's, Next, Virgin Media and many others.

A spokesman for the firm said: "We took a definitive decision back in late 2011 to embark on a UK regional partnership programme with selected schools. The aims of the programme were multi-faceted, but the principle goals were to enhance the profile of the logistics industry within the community and to demonstrate the myriad opportunities the industry can offer young people at all levels."

Academy chiefs are now keen to establish similar partnerships.

Clarion call to join the revolution at Pfizer site, where 'major announcement' is due

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE world-class laboratories and facilities left behind when Pfizer departed Kent provide a unique opportunity for incoming businesses to take advantage of, say the new owners of the Sandwich site.

Discovery Park bought the plant for an undisclosed fee in August and is now working to develop it as a centre for excellence, mainly in the science and technology fields.

The company hopes to create 3,000 jobs, regenerating the local economy by providing high-end employment in what is now officially identified as an Enterprise Zone by the Government.

Pfizer still maintains a presence at the sprawling site – but as tenant rather than owner – and there are other operations on site, notably LGC, a company that was responsible for drug-testing Olympic athletes at London 2012.

The new landlords say they are very hopeful of announcing a new high-profile incomer before Christmas.

Discovery Park took on the role of regenerating the former headquarters of Samsung on Teesside, which at its height employed 2,000 people before closing in 2005.

Now rechristened Wynyard Park, it employs roughly the same number – but is home to 65 companies rather than just one.

Paul Barker, managing director of >>

HIGH HOPES: Discovery Park MD Paul Barker believes that some 3,000 jobs can be created in what is a designated Enterprise Zone

Winners step forward to claim their pot in 'ambitious' £35 million programme

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE first firms to successfully apply for interest-free loans to boost their business and create jobs through the £35 million scheme to expand the east Kent economy were unveiled this week.

The companies' plans for growth and increased employment all passed the scrutiny of the Expansion East Kent scheme, which aims to generate 5,000 new jobs by offering firms in Thanet, Dover, Shepway and Canterbury zero-rate loans.

An audience of business leaders and entrepreneurs met the businesses at Dover Cruise Terminal, where Grow For It, a new campaign from Kent County Council, was launched, aimed at driving business investment and growth into east Kent.

KCC is administering the scheme, which uses Government money to boost business.

Paul Carter, leader of Kent County Council, said: "The initial tranche of funding has been agreed with six companies, with a further seven whose projects we have approved awaiting sign-off – creating a total of 327 jobs.

"Kent County Council has agreed to invest more than £3.6m in these 13 projects

ALL SMILES: County council leader Paul Carter, left, and Thanet North MP Sir Roger Gale are both delighted with the Grow For It campaign from Expansion East Kent, the investment fund we set up with support from the Government's Regional Growth Fund.

"The projects include accountancy, pharmaceutical research, manufacturing, tourism and leisure and childcare.

"In addition, we have a number of other exciting proposals in the pipeline to create more than 5,000 jobs that we are keen to get off the starting blocks.

"We were tremendously impressed by the determination and entrepreneurial spirit shown by these firms. They all possess a sound business basis, a vision of what is possible and the skills necessary to succeed – we wish them all well.

"Expansion East Kent is an ambitious programme. It also aims to unlock private-sector finance, stimulating more than £300m in associated investment over the course of the next four years, creating a massive driver for the east Kent economy.

"Expansion East Kent is providing financial support to firms as interest-free loans.

"This intelligent use of funding means we can recycle the money to provide vital business support on an ongoing basis, benefiting local firms and creating local jobs for years to come."

Among those to benefit are:

- Thanet-based Bumble Beez, which will be a family entertainment centre with provision for children with disabilities.
- South East Retail Limited, which aims to restore a Victorian building and develop a 20-bedroom upmarket boutique hotel in Margate
- Chalk Hill is a small start-up accountancy practice in Shepway supporting leisure and tourism
- H V Wooding is a medium-sized manufacturing business based in Hythe. It is one of the UK's leading manufacturers of precision-engineered components and assemblies whose clients include international companies such as Rolls Royce, Schneider Electric, Honeywell and ABB.

• Formed in 2009, and now in its second full trading year, UK Mobile Bars is a mobile-bar hire service for weddings, parties and events that is expanding into corporate work.

• Dover nursery Creative Minds will provide high-quality care and education, catering for children from three months to five years.

Damian Collins, MP for Folkestone and Hythe, said: "This will help create new jobs by supporting the expansion plans of these firms.

"I would encourage other businesses to apply for support from the East Kent Regional Growth Fund and am pleased to support the new Grow For It campaign, which is working to encourage more local applications and also more businesses in general to look at investing in our area."

Thanet North MP Sir Roger Gale added: "I am pleased Margate is represented in the portfolio of companies through South East Retail, which has exciting plans for the development of a job-creating boutique hotel in Margate. This is precisely the kind of leisure-related business that we need to promote in the interests of east Kent."

To find out full details of the application process, simply visit www.kent.gov.uk/expansion.

SMEs given the platform to talk at Westminster

SMALL-business-owners have met Dartford MP Gareth Johnson to discuss the issues and problems they are facing as they seek to boost the local economy.

Among the most important issues were fuel tax, pensions and the increasing retirement age, apprenticeships and young trainee schemes and business financing.

The meeting, including a tour of Westminster and a question-and-answer session with Johnson and Neville Gaunt, chair of the Federation of Small Businesses North Kent branch.

It was designed to give small-business-owners in Dartford and north Kent a chance to give their views on the issues affecting businesses, share their local experiences of trade in the recession and network with each other.

Johnson also emphasised the need to nurture and protect them in Dartford.

The MP said: "The reason I set up this meeting with Neville Gaunt and other FSB members in Dartford was to give local businesses the chance to tell me first-hand the difficulties they are facing.

"There is no doubt the recession has hit small businesses hard, but the passion these entrepreneurs demonstrated during the discussions gave me an even stronger sense of hope for small businesses and for local trade. There is clearly a wealth of innovation and dedication in Dartford, and I fully support the vital local role that small businesses play in our community."

Gaunt added: "It is important small businesses understand the system to ensure their voice is heard and the legislators create an environment for economic growth."

We're trying to bring back the good times to this part of Kent, say new site-owners « Discovery Park, said: "We're trying to bring the good times back to this part of Kent. At one time 7,000 people worked here and made a big contribution to the local economy.

"We have been speaking to former Pfizer employees who still work in the pharmaceutical business but are based in London, Cambridge – or even Belgium. They still have family in east Kent and would love the chance to come back.

"So there would be no shortage of highly-skilled applicants when companies start to move in here.

"Our aim is to create a business park with a strong science and technology base, but there is a lot of office space available, as well, which could be used for other businesses.

"The legacy Pfizer has left is world-class equipment and facilities which would be beyond the reach of most companies.

"A high-profile business or the research facility of a top university arriving here will act as a spur to bring in others and we are currently in negotiations with two or three at the moment. We are hoping for a major announcement before Christmas."

The idea is that firms – especially smaller operations – can take a lease on premises for as little as three months.

If things go well, then they can expand, but if it's not working out they can "hand back the keys and walk away".

Discovery Park has been talking with companies in the UK and abroad about the benefits of moving to Sandwich; these include an attractive lifestyle for employees and excellent transport links to both London and Europe.

A recent delegation has just come back

EYES FORWARD:

Discovery Park's owners plan to create a centre at Sandwich with a strong science and technology base from a trade fair in Boston, United States.

The site is divided into two parts, with the Millennium Buildings built around the turn of the century and still functioning.

The entire site is 220 acres in size, but it also has 13 unoccupied premises built in the 1980s that have been unused for many years.

They are currently costing about £1 million a year to maintain and Discovery Park wants to demolish them – even though some were used recently as a setting in Brad Pitt's new film called World War Z.

Damp has intruded into the carpets and ceilings and the interiors have been left to rot. Interior fittings that are of use will be recycled, but the buildings themselves will be torn down over a period of about 20 weeks, should permission be granted by the local authority.

A planning application was submitted on Friday, November 16, to Dover District Council and a decision is expected in January.

Barker said: "We are committed to ensuring the long-term sustainability of Discovery Park, and further to the announcement of our plans to create 3,000 new jobs over the next five years redevelopment of the site will be necessary.

"The application follows our recent announcement detailing our vision for the site, which is to create a sustainable mixed-use community centred on the world-class science and technology facilities.

"With this in mind we believe the proposed demolition of the buildings is necessary, as they are not fit for purpose."

Barker added that the space created would be used to for purpose-built facilities for future tenants.

"This initial phase of proposed activity is crucial," he said. "While under way, it will enable us to focus on attracting global tenants to the Millennium Buildings, which alone offer more than 1.5 million sq ft of premium commercial space."

Paul Watkins, leader of Dover District Council, said: "We welcome the confirmation that Discovery Park Ltd has made to the long-term future of the site.

"The proposal for a structured programme of demolition is not unexpected."

Kent County Council has been enthusiastic in its support of Discovery Park. KCC leader Paul Carter said: "Discovery Park offers world-class facilities that are looking to grow and prosper."

Roger House reveals how the Federation of Small Businesses is leading the fight against ever-growing red tape and bureaucracy

Easy-to-access online legal and tax information is a valuable member benefit

It is the goal of the Federation of Small Businesses to continually deliver unbeatable value for its membership.

Members have significant benefits available to them and membership provides protection and commercial advantage in line with the needs of most businesses.

There are also additional membership facilities available for FSB members delivered by our service-providers.

The FSB Legal Protection Scheme is the cornerstone of membership.

Today's businesses face a plethora of red tape and bureaucracy, exacerbated by the increasingly litigious society within which we live and trade.

The exposure is forever growing. Reliable and practical support is difficult to find and expensive to maintain.

As a right of membership, every business will benefit from:

- 24/7 legal advice from qualified lawyers. Staffed by solicitors and barristers, the FSB legal advice line is provided as a right of membership and the only additional cost is the telephone call, which is charged at local network rates.
- Legal insurance protection. The insurance protection covers full, joint and retired and associate members for a wide range of business-related activities. The insurance protection includes legal fees and statutory awards in specified disputes, including employment and tax. There is a limit of £50,000 for ANY ONE CLAIM; however, the protection is available for more than one claim up to a MAXIMUM of £1 million in any one year. The insurance is subject to terms and conditions.

- Legal information is online. Members are able to access information and documentation on employment and commercial law, tax and health and safety available through the FSB website when logged in as a member.

With thousands of members using the site every month, it is clear that the provision of easy-to-access online legal and tax information is a valuable member benefit.

Members continue to find it useful, informative and necessary in the battle to keep abreast of legal developments in employment law, commercial and business law and health and safety information.

In addition, there is a huge range of other benefits. It is entirely a member-led organisation overseen by a regional committee and driven at the grass roots by five local branches and their committees.

With almost 7,000 members, there is a growing value in the networking and collaboration opportunities, together with the opportunity to meet and lobby both local and national politicians at all levels.

For more information, please phone the office on 01622 688134 or email office.kent@fsb.org.uk.

I look forward to seeing you either as a member or at one of the many networking events I attend. You will always be made welcome in the FSB.

Roger House, regional chairman, Federation of Small Businesses

LOOK CLOSELY:

Companies across the county need all the help they can get when it comes to tackling the small print of contracts and legislation... the Federation of Small Businesses is always ready and willing to help its members in an increasingly thankless task

THE Federation of Small Businesses says the Chancellor's Autumn Statement must put small businesses at the heart of reforms.

The FSB is calling for:

- Increased competition in the banking sector to provide finance to small firms by setting out plans for a Small Business Bank.
- Reform of the labour market and an extension to the National Insurance Contributions Holiday scheme.
- A simplified tax system and the planned 3 pence fuel-duty rise to be scrapped.

The federation is urging George Osborne to use his Autumn Statement to put a firm plan in place for Kent's small firms to grow.

House said: "Small-business policymaking has been subject to a range of confusing patchwork approaches that have often had minimal impact on the ground.

"We want to see a clear plan of action from the Chancellor which he can take forward to Budget 2013, detailing the long-term support small firms need.

"Key to this is going to be the Small Business Bank and eventually how it can become the Small Business Administration supporting small businesses over the long term."

Look to the centre that helps to repair the economy and delivers solutions

By Roger House

THE Centre for Micro Business is a Community Interest Company – a not-for-profit organisation dedicated to “repairing the economy” through improving the performance and capability of those setting out to start a business or those seeking growth in an existing business with up to 10 employees.

Government figures indicate greater survival for those having taken professional advice.

Eighty per cent of businesses starting without advice fail; of the remainder, 60 per cent seeking advice succeed.

The centre delivers a unique programme devised by business practitioners in pragmatic and logical stages with a compelling delivery process.

If you are ambitious to start a business or grow an existing one, whether commercial or social enterprise, the CMB will deliver a structured and cost-effective solution.

Everything is focused on the individual and brings practical resources to support you with realistic and pragmatic advice and guidance. All you need to bring is your passion and energy.

The concept for the CMB has been well researched and tested with a wide range of organisations and decision-makers in the public, private and education sectors.

With the demise of the publicly-funded Business Link service, there is a need to fill the gap with a quality-controlled alternative, based on delivery by business people with the aid of selected appropriate partners. It has the capacity

Get advice and ensure your company isn't one of the many that fall so early to be scaled into a national network – working with the best business practitioners and innovative thinkers, partnered with educational and sector associates.

The CMB has created structured umbrella organisation with quality-maintained programmes providing services, knowledge and facilities designed to support and develop the micro business from start-up to growth, through individual and collaborative activity.

Our stakeholder team incorporates representatives from each of the sectors; we also have memorandum of understanding with the social enterprise and voluntary sectors and a significant agreement bringing the support of FE College input.

This is a model for scalability.

The objective is to help create viable and sustainable businesses through the preparation of their owner-operators in all aspects of core business activity.

To assist them in being creative, innovative and, ultimately, fit to supply, fit for investment, fit to employ and fit for growth.

Delivering programmes through events, groups and one-to-one sessions is the approach, backed by free mentoring or paid coaching as appropriate to the programme.

There are three main strands with their own programme formats for start-up (New Me), companies ambitious to grow (Fit to Grow) and a growing team of trained business mentors.

Working with the CMB, you will have access and signposting to:

- active entrepreneurs
 - business-plan preparation
 - sales and marketing advice
 - business resources
 - financial advice
 - potential investors
 - major networking groups
 - mentoring
 - Educational institutions
 - HR and employment advice
 - bid-writing support
 - apprentices
 - coaching
 - collaboration groups
 - using standards
 - expert consultants
- Our programmes

New Me is designed by business for business and based on the best techniques and knowledge base available. It is an umbrella for bringing together a wide range of specialists in a structured format taking a prospective business-owner through a logical and pragmatic series of steps.

This removes the unknown and lays the foundation for business sustainability.

It is delivered in programmes from taster, business accelerator, intermediate and advanced.

The material and programme concept are well proven and CMB is working with a number of organisations to roll out the programme across the south of England.

Fit to Grow will enable business-owners to build a business strategy for growth and engage their staff team in the process, embedding a company-wide approach to the business development.

Working primarily with individuals and small complementary groups, the programme sets out to address the findings following an initial business assessment.

The CMB prepares individuals seeking to become mentors and provides signposting to businesses either from its own database or through the IoEE (Institute of Enterprise and Entrepreneurs) portal. Training is delivered by a SFEDI-accredited partner under the national Get Mentoring programme and brings to the CMC a SFEDI Centre of Excellence.

Companies fail to cash in on capital allowance tax breaks

SMALL businesses across the county could be in line for a tax-break windfall worth in the region of £220 million, according to new research by capital allowances specialist Portal Tax Claims.

An estimated 6,175 firms in Kent are still eligible for the tax rebate under Government rules for businesses owning commercial property.

Most large corporations have taken full advantage of the system of capital allowances, according to Portal Tax Claims, but many small and medium-sized enterprises are failing to lodge a comprehensive claim, but the company says it is very much in their interests to do so.

Experts say it is up to the businesses to look into the issue as it may not be one with which their financial department is familiar.

Shaun Murphy, managing director, said: “Businesses in Kent are missing a trick as far as capital allowances are concerned, often assuming that their accountant has the matter in hand.

“A second common misconception is that capital allowances only apply to items such as computers and vehicles.

“Our research shows that many firms are failing to take their business premises into account and that each property potentially contains thousands of claimable items.

“Submitting a rebate can be daunting for the uninitiated, but the financial rewards can be significant.”

The Portal Tax Claims research suggests that some 2,000 businesses that submitted this type of capital allowances claim to HMRC in 2012 would have received an average tax relief pay-out of more than £36,000.

Allowances can often be found up to a value of 40 per cent of a property's purchase price and it is believed that about 90 per cent of commercial buildings in Kent are eligible for a rebate.

MAKING BIG STRIDES: From the Bibby Financial Services survey there seems to be increased business confidence that the economy is about to come out of its current slump

Companies see better times ahead provided cash is made available

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A RETURN to steady economic growth across the county over the next six months is the bold prediction of one of the UK's leading financial specialists – but business chiefs say that if it is to happen cash for investment must be made more easily available.

Bibby Financial Services conducted a survey that has shown an increase in business confidence in Kent among small and medium-sized businesses.

But they are also calling for easier access to finance to help drive recovery, according to the latest economic study.

While the level of new customers and orders for goods and services has fallen over the third quarter of 2012 across the South East, Jon Charsley, of Bibby Financial Services, says the message he is hearing from SMEs in the region is that many are gearing up for an anticipated recovery in 2013.

The Business Factors Index, produced quarterly by Bibby Financial Services, tracks the outlook and performance of businesses across the UK.

The latest data suggest almost a quarter (22 per cent) have been investing in their business over the past 12 months, almost double the 12 per cent reported at the same point last year, while about one in five (19 per cent) describes their business as 'doing really well' – a significant increase on 3 per cent in the previous quarter.

A third say they have seen an increase in customer enquiries about their business, which is marginally up on the national average of 31 per cent. In addition, 25 per cent want to see a loosening of lending criteria to enable greater access to finance to help grow business.

The key findings of the Bibby Financial Services Business Factors Index for the so tough that they have had to make cuts, compared with 25 per cent in Q2 and 38 per cent year-on-year

- 62 per cent of firms have not applied for external finance over the past 12 months, up 54 per cent year-on-year.

Charsley said: "Although we have seen a fall in the level of trade, we have to remember the context of the recession and, although it is encouraging the Office for National Statistics has said the economy grew by 1 per cent in Q3, the reality for many is that trading is still extremely tough.

"What we see as the big story in the region is the increasing level of investment as it underlines that SMEs have not sat back during the period of recession but have been investing in their future.

"However, what does concern us is that 62 per cent of SMEs have not applied for any external funding in the past 12 months, which could hamper any attempt at a sustained recovery.

"We feel that business-owners are not applying for funds because they believe they will be turned down."

"In order to achieve a sustainable economic recovery, it is vital businesses have the necessary funding support in place.

"Alternative funding facilities such as invoice finance will adapt to the business as it grows by advancing funds based on the value of outstanding customer sales invoices without the burden of taking on more debt."

Big story in the region is the increasing levels of investment by our SMEs during recession

South East include:

- Almost a third, 29 per cent, said they had seen an increase in new customers over Q3, down from 53 per cent in Q2 and 38 per cent year-on-year
- Almost a quarter, 22 per cent of business, said they had seen an increase in orders over Q3, just down from 23 per cent in Q2
- Just 12 per cent of firms say things are

PETER HOBBS demonstrates how your local Chamber of Commerce can be a big help during difficult times

RUNNING a small business can be a lonely and at times difficult job, particularly during this very challenging economic climate.

That's where your Chamber of Commerce can help, not just with valuable advice and support but also by providing businesses with a chance to meet and seek out solutions with others who may have faced similar challenges in the past.

Here in Kent there are a variety of local Chambers, many servicing town-based businesses and run by volunteer business people.

Some have been operating for more than 150 years; all are fiercely independent, non-profit-making and non-party-political and funded principally by their members.

British Chambers of Commerce Accredited

In addition to the local Chambers, there is also a second tier of Chambers that cover the whole of Kent and Medway and provide representation and a more comprehensive range of services, information and guidance to a broader sector of businesses large and small.

Kent Channel Chamber is one of those that are accredited nationally with the British Chambers of Commerce (BCC) to ensure we deliver only the very highest level of service and performance. The BCC network is a powerful and influential network of 52 Chambers, which represent more than 100,000 businesses across the UK.

1:1 Advice and Support

A confidential 1:1 advisory service has been one of our most valued services for many years, particularly for small and micro businesses.

These entrepreneurs have limited opportunities for seeking out help and support and often miss out on any locally-held events because of workplace pressures.

Our expert advisers are available locally on a regular basis and can also provide practical help to small business and start-ups wishing to take advantage of the £35 million Expansion East Kent Loan Fund.

Enterprise Clubs

Starting out in business can be particularly daunting, but budding entrepreneurs in Kent need not be alone.

Regardless of the type of new business you are exploring, or whether you plan to work from home, open a shop or rent office accommodation, your Chamber can help you.

Monthly Enterprise Clubs have now been running for a year or more and are an ideal support facility.

The meetings are free and provide an informal networking opportunity where you can share ideas and receive expert advice from professionals in the local business community.

Volunteer Business Mentoring

Business people are also being encouraged to contribute to their own communities by acting as mentors to local voluntary-sector organisations.

These mentors will act as a critical friend to some of the most inspirational and committed people in the third sector, able to share skills and experiences with the ultimate goal of helping these often fragile organisations be successful and achieve their social aims.

Volunteers from the business community are now being sought who have professional experience and expertise in a variety of areas: from consulting to accounting, marketing, HR or IT and more.

Whatever your professional background, our Chamber is looking for people who like a challenge, who are willing to listen and learn and who want to use their professional skills for good.

Peter Hobbs is the chief executive of Kent Channel Chamber of Commerce

KENT INVICTA CHAMBER

Innovating to help meet the challenge of business

THE business climate continues to fluctuate and take on new forms, which means if you want to retain or increase your market share then you have to adapt to the changing marketplace.

Business as usual is the easy option, but you could find yourself being left behind.

Innovation and creativity are two words fast becoming the norm for Kent firms, which are continuing to grow and develop.

Kent Invicta Chamber faces the same trials and tribulations as all other businesses in the private sector, and we too have had to rise to the challenges brought about by the new economic landscape.

The one thing it has done is make us focus on what we provide and – importantly – what the business community needs from us to prosper.

This objective has seen our membership grow month on month, making us one of the largest and most active chambers in the South East, which has to be of benefit to the Kent business community.

Our focus has been on providing a range of products and services that meet the needs of the county's business community, whether they want to source more local businesses or look for overseas markets.

With a rather stagnant home economy, we have paid particular attention to providing support to companies when working in international markets – zeroing in on areas that concern both new and existing exporters, including payments and exchange rates, documentation and legal obligations.

Partnership working has certainly been a key to our success.

There are many organisations out there doing great things, so we don't look at reinventing the wheel – we look at where we can add value.

Providing an environment that is conducive to business growth and enterprise is a key remit of the Kent Invicta Chamber

We provide that all-important voice to those who make the decisions that affect us all, leaving business to get on with what it does best – creating wealth, jobs and opportunities.

SHEPWAY DISTRICT COUNCIL - MEMBERS' ALLOWANCES SCHEME

The Local Authorities' (Members' Allowances) (England) Regulations 2003 place certain duties on local authorities in connection with publicising the recommendations made by their Independent Remuneration Panel.

- The report of the Independent Remuneration Panel proposes a model for allowances that is transparent, sustainable, easy to understand and easy to operate. The model proposed would link all allowances to the basic councillors allowance (paid to all councillors) by a 'points' system.
- The recommended 'point' scores for different roles are based on the panel's consideration of the appropriate and justifiable relativities between those roles as they operate at Shepway District Council. The consolidated basic allowance referred to below has a point score of 100. The relative 'scores' may not be the same as in other Councils, but the panel is a Shepway panel looking at what is relevant and appropriate within Shepway.
- Based on this approach, the report proposes point scores for each of the special responsibility allowances, which will, if adopted, establish the relativities both between the different special responsibility allowances and between those allowances and the basic allowance.

The recommendations of the panel relate to the Members' Allowances Scheme for 2012/13. They are as follows:

1. That the option for councillors to join the Local Government Pension Scheme not be introduced.
2. That Shepway District Council introduce a dependants' carers' allowance at the level of the national minimum wage.
3. That no changes be made to the current scheme for reimbursing travel and subsistence expenses.
4. That the scheme for travelling and subsistence related to official duties be adopted by the council.
5. That the voluntary discount be maintained at 50%.
6. That the current ICT allowance be consolidated into the basic allowance.
7. That the revised consolidated basic allowance be set at £4,500.
8. That the councillors basic allowances be adjusted annually at the start of the civic year by the Consumer Price Index figure for the preceding February (published in March).
9. That the application of indexation to the councillors basic allowance be subject to an annual vote of full Council.
10. That special responsibility allowances be determined by reference to the basic allowance and amended in line with amendments to that basic allowance.
11. That the committees are classified into tiers and that special responsibility allowances be paid to the chairs of tier one and tier two committees only.
12. That the special responsibility allowance for the chair of a tier one committee be set at 100 points which equates to an allowance of £4,500.
13. That the special responsibility allowance for the chair of a tier two committee be set at 30 points and frozen at its current level until the effects of indexation brings the proposed allowance to the level of the current allowance which equates to an allowance of £1,350.
14. The payment of special responsibility allowances to vice-chairs of committees is discontinued.
15. The special responsibility allowance for the role of cabinet members is set at the level of 200 points which equates to an allowance of £9,000.
16. The special responsibility allowance for the role of Deputy Leader of the Council is set at the level of 220 points which equates to an allowance of £9,900.
17. The special responsibility allowance for Leader of the Council is set at 440 points which equates to an allowance of £19,800.
18. That the special responsibility allowance for Leader of the Council is frozen at its current level until such time as the proposed level matches the current level under indexation arrangements.
19. That up to a maximum of nine special responsibility allowances are paid to Lead Members set at a level of 30 points which equates to an allowance of £1,350.
20. That the current group allowances be abolished.
21. That a single special responsibility allowance for the role of 'Leader of the Opposition' (being defined as the leader of the largest minority group not forming part of the administration) be introduced at the level of 150 points which equates to an allowance of £6,750.
22. The special responsibility allowance for the role of Chair of the Council is set at 150 points which equates to an allowance of £6,750.
23. The special responsibility allowance for the role of Vice-Chair of the Council is set at 30 points which equates to an allowance of £1,350.
24. The SRA for Co-opted Members covered by the scheme of remuneration for Councillors be set at 15 points which equates to an allowance of £675.

The Council will meet in the new year to consider the recommendations of the panel and to decide whether to adopt the new scheme.

More information is available on the Shepway District Council website under Council and Democracy or for public inspection during normal working hours, between 9.00am and 5.00pm at the Civic Centre, Castle Hill Avenue, Folkestone, Kent, CT20 2QY; telephone 01303 853488 or email committee@shepway.gov.uk

THE INTERVIEW

Janine Duvitski

TO SOME she is known as the crossword-loving swinger in ITV1's Benidorm and to others she is the mild-mannered neighbour in BBC's sitcom One Foot In The Grave, but this winter Janine Duvitski will become something far more sinister.

The actress, who is recognisable from her role as Jaqueline Stewart in the award-winning ITV sitcom set in southern Spain, will take the lead in the Tunbridge Wells Assembly Hall Theatre pantomime.

The newly-appointed Wicked Queen has admitted that the Snow White And The Seven Dwarfs production will be her first foray in pantos for quite a while.

"I haven't done panto since 1966. It was in Manchester and it was Babes In The Wood, and I played one of the babes. The Royal Shakespeare Company did a Christmas panto in 1980, which we performed for The Queen at The Barbican in London. But that's about it.

"I quite fancied doing it again. I can't say just for the money, can I? I just really like the time of year and it feels quite Christmassy doing a panto, so I've quite fancied doing one for a few years.

"I seem to do mostly television nowadays and I don't ever want to leave it too long between doing theatre, so I thought this would be a good opportunity."

The 59-year-old performer is looking forward to two things from the production: spending a little time in Kent and bringing out her evil side.

"I have been down here a few times before, but Tunbridge Wells looks gorgeous. I can't wait to do my Christmas shopping there. I can't wait to get to know it [the town].

"Playing the Wicked Queen made the part all the more attractive. It's always more fun to be the baddie. It's harder to be nice and beautiful – the Wicked Queen has got this wonderful madness about her.

"I've got four children of my own and two stepchildren, but I've always got on really well with them.

"So this is my chance to let out my wicked stepmother. I'm sure I'll be able to dredge some evil up within me."

Duvitski was born in Lancashire to a Polish father, hence her surname, before relocating to London aged 15 to join the East 15 Acting School.

Her theatre credits are vast and include a stint with the Royal Shakespeare Company, as well as countless appearances in top shows both in the West End and around the UK.

Her small-screen debut came in 1972, in TV star given chance to show her wicked ways

Having not performed in pantomime since 1966, the comedy actress jumped at the chance to release her inner demon, as Joe Bill learns

ROLE PLAY: Duvitski is excited by playing the Wicked Queen in this year's Tunbridge Wells pantomime popular BBC detective show Z Cars, before she went on to star in Vanity Fair, Midsomer Murders, The Worst Week Of My Life, Foyle's War and Trial And Retribution.

Duvitski's film credits are pretty impressive, as well, with roles in The Madness Of King George, About A Boy with Hugh Grant and even Dracula in 1979, alongside the legendary Sir Laurence Olivier and Donald Pleasence.

But it is her parts in sitcoms that have made her a household British face.

There was Waiting For God in the early 90s as the prudish care-home assistant Jane Edwards, before she went on to play Pippa Trench, Victor Meldrew's innocent neighbour, in One Foot In The Grave for seven years.

It is her current role as the ditsy but ultimately loveable Jaqueline Stewart in the Bafta-nominated Benidorm that has really got people talking.

Duvitski, along with her onscreen husband, are the resident swingers at the Solana Hotel, and as you can imagine this leads to some embarrassing situations.

But, as she divulged, Benidorm the place was as much an eye-opener as some of the scenes in which she has to act.

"There's something about it. When I first went there, I thought 'Oh my god, what am I doing in this place?' because it was so full-on."

The sixth series starts filming in March next year after the writers decided against a 2012 offering.

"There are really good things about Benidorm – the climate is unbelievable," said Duvitski. "I really missed the sun this year just staying in England. The beaches are amazing and there are wonderful Spanish places to eat.

"The cast live just outside Benidorm because it's a bit tricky if you live in the centre – when the cast walk down the street, it gets a bit hectic.

"Of course, there are the bits that everybody associates with the show.

"We quite often go into work very early in the morning and people are still coming home from the pubs and clubs very drunk.

"It's a mad place, but you can have a good time there. People can have a good holiday and you don't have to be well off to have a great time there. It's quite a happy place.

"We sort of hide away most of the time, but we have the odd mad night and go into central Benidorm and get on the karaoke."

But as for taking after her compatriots and setting up Janine's Bar in central Benidorm once she retires from acting, Duvitski is (fairly) unequivocal.

"I certainly am not. I don't think so anyway... although I wouldn't mind having a place in Spain because there are all the bits I like. But actually running a bar – no way!"

More jobs are on the way for the busy performer, with a new children's series for the BBC, as well as a drama set in Bulgaria, where she will play a blind woman. But first up is Tunbridge Wells and the Wicked Queen.

Alongside Janine at this year's Assembly Hall Theatre panto will be CBBC star Chris Pizzey, EastEnders market inspector Nick Wilton and CITV's Jenny Jones.

■ Snow White And The Seven Dwarfs runs from Friday, December 12, to Sunday, January 13, at the Assembly Hall Theatre in Tunbridge Wells.

Talented pair prove they can cut it at young chef awards

TWO youngsters have burst on to the county's culinary scene after triumphing at the latest Kent Young Chef Award.

After seeing off 100 other competitors, as well as conquering a nail-biting live final, the senior and junior section winners were congratulated by Michelin star chef Richard Phillips.

Benjamin Colley, 12, from Hawkhurst, who goes to school at The Skinners' School in Tunbridge Wells, clinched the junior title with his outstanding fallow deer wellington.

Eden Allsworth, 14, of Canterbury, who goes to school at Highsted Grammar School, Sittingbourne, won the senior award with her beautiful duo of pan-roasted belly of pork and line-caught sea bass with apple wood-smoked mash and medley of autumn vegetables.

The pair took on eight other entrants in the two-hour final held at K College in Tonbridge, hosted by a panel of expert judges that included celebrity chef and Kent restaurateur Richard Phillips; Tony Blake, commercial manager at kff; Ian Piper, deputy head of faculty at K College; and Tony O'Brien, head of food operations at London Business School.

Thackeray's owner Phillips said: "It might sound a bit of a cliché, but the bar has been raised yet again this year. The levels of flavours and presentation achieved were outstanding and there were dishes here that the general public would have been happy to pay good money for, such was their professionalism."

The competition featured students from 23 of the county's schools, all eager to prove their culinary genius.

Benjamin said: "I'm over the moon – I can't believe how good this feels. To find out I'd made the final was incredible, and now to have won the junior title means so much to me, especially as I hope to go into the restaurant trade one day.

"Entering a competition like this is so worthwhile – you get so much out of it and I'd encourage everyone to have a go next year."

The pressure was really on for the youngsters, who were displayed on a big screen in the college's View Restaurant in front of the deputy mayor and mayoress of Tonbridge and Malling; Mark Dance, Kent County Council's cabinet member for regeneration and economic development; and some 45 supporters from the eight schools represented in the final.

Senior winner Eden was equally ecstatic about her win.

She said: "I'm completely overwhelmed – it's just incredible. Just taking part in the final is an amazing experience and then to be picked as the winner is indescribable. I have a passion for cooking and this is a wonderful step to working in a professional kitchen one day."

As well as the winners' trophies, hampers and certificates, all the finalists will have fantastic mini chef experience and lunch at one of Richard Phillips's restaurants.

The two winners will devise the menu for the Kent Young Chef Award charity dinner in aid of The Heart Of Kent hospice on Thursday, January 24, 2013, at The Windmill by Richard Phillips in Hollingbourne.

Drop of your favourite tippie will help a hero

THE makers of a well-known whisky company are launching a limited-edition bottle in a bid to raise money for Armed Services charity Help for Heroes.

Bell's Whisky is on a mission to raise £1 million for the organisation, which provides direct, practical support to wounded, injured and sick Armed Forces personnel, veterans and their families.

The new bottle features the evocative Help for Heroes logo and will be sold nationwide.

As with all bottles of Bell's, it also proudly displays the Gaelic battle cry 'Afore Ye Go', marking an affinity the Bell's family has had with the military since the First World War.

A series of fund-raising activities will take place throughout the year to help meet the £1m target.

Bryn Parry OBE, co-founder and chief executive of the charity, said: "Help for Heroes is all about 'doing your bit' and Bell's pledge to support us by launching this limited-edition bottle will raise much-needed funds to provide support for our 'blokes', the men and women injured in the service of our country."

H4H has already funded a variety of projects, including the £8.5m rehabilitation complex at the Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre in Surrey, as well as a £3.5m treatment centre for combat stress.

The charity is committed to funding the operating costs at all the H4H centres for 20 years.

Wed to Sat, December 5-7

www.theatreroyalmargate.com

SCROOGE heads to the seaside this winter as A Christmas Carol finds the stage at Theatre Royal Margate.

This original musical version of the classic Charles Dickens tale is performed by Talkwood Productions.

As most people will know, Ebenezer Scrooge is a thoroughly disagreeable and mean man who prefers money to people.

However, he is taken on a journey of discovery by the ghosts of Christmas past, present and future – it transforms him.

Included among the characters to show him the error of his ways are Bob Cratchitt and Tiny Tim.

Tickets cost £14 or £12 for concessions, and £46 for a family of four.

TOP stand-up comedian Imran Yusuf returns to The Gulbenkian with his new show Bring The Thunder.

Following sell-out success of the comedian's first two Edinburgh shows, Yusuf bagged a Comedy Award Best Newcomer nomination and his popularity flourished.

Bring The Thunder is a show about pursuing your dreams and ambitions with unrelenting enthusiasm and perseverance.

Failing that, Yusuf is likely to be fast and furious with a technique of bringing seemingly light-hearted satire to mask topical commentary.

This is surely one for future stadium tours! Tickets cost £12 and the show is suitable for ages 16 and over.

Tickets are available online.

Bouncing baby bison New pair join the herd

HOOFSOCK keepers at Port Lympne Wild Animal Park have welcomed two baby bison to the herd. Born within days of each other, the male pair take the number of European bison to an impressive 13.

The European bison was once widespread across Europe and northern Asia, but by 1900 hunters had driven them to near-extinction.

Some, though, survived in zoos and, thanks to a captive breeding programme, there are more than 3,000 alive today.

Section leader Bob Savill said: "It's incredible to think that the species was teetering on the brink of extinction – every birth is very welcome."

He's electric... musician swaps the charts for something more current

By Joe Bill

joe.bill@archant.co.uk

A FORMER musician from Whitstable has gone from standing in the spotlight to putting them up in people's homes.

Chris Butterworth has worked alongside the likes of Tom Jones and Herbie Hancock, not to mention penning a famous song that hit the pop charts in 1998.

The 41-year-old father of two, who lives in the seaside town, has since given up his life in the music industry to become an electrician, starting his own company, Wired Electrics.

A far cry from the days that he spent as the brains behind the band Trubble, bagging a UK top-25 hit with Dancing Baby – the famous (or infamous) 3D graphic that starred in the video went on to feature in 90s TV show Ally McBeal.

"It was a cheesy one-off," he said. "It was so naff, but it did do well in the charts both here in England and around the world. It also reached the dizzy heights of being played in the Queen Vic in EastEnders for two episodes in a row."

The novelty record he recorded with singer Shalisa even knocked Madonna off the Japanese international music chart.

After working in a recording studio in north London, where he met Tom Jones, Chris went on to form a band, Big Hair, which toured Europe.

"We played many festivals, including Glastonbury, and have played every year at Canterbury festival Lounge On The Farm.

LIVEWIRE: Chris Butterworth has swapped the dancing baby for a more grounded career

"It was great fun but not always well paid."

Arguably the height of his career in sound came when he was asked to write music for the Hollywood film The Guru starring Jimi Mistry, but work became harder to come by and Chris decided it was time for a change.

"Sometimes we would work days on something, pitching to an advertising company and then not get anything out of it," he said.

"It came to the point where I wanted to go and do a day's work and come home with a day's money and make it very simple. That led down the line to getting a trade."

Almost five years ago, Chris retrained as an electrician before starting his own business: "My interest in being an electrician definitely linked back to when I was a sound engineer.

"It was messing around with cables, getting things to work. In the studio you had to have a bit of electrical knowledge and know-how. I always had that interest in making things work."

And just as he used to spark on stage, the former musician was up for the task of working with real live wires.

"There's always something that comes up that you haven't seen before and that will always keep you on your toes. Technology is also constantly changing. It's really interesting. Being face to face with customers is also something I really enjoy about my new career.

"You do your work, do a good job, get paid and get more work because of it. In music you can do the best music in the world for an advertising company and they won't take it because they want to use something that the director's mate did. For political reasons your work doesn't get out there. It's all out of your hands."

Chris's work has taken him all over the country, to the Seychelles installing garden lighting and to the pads of the stars, having installed garden lighting for the likes of TV presenter Sarah Beeny and designer Cath Kidston as well as for comedian Harry Hill.

"I could have still been falling about doing music and maybe something would have happened. Maybe I could have got a big advert and be a millionaire, but I doubt it."

Students focus on Dr Martens

ICONIC footwear brand Dr Martens asked students at the University for the Creative Arts at Rochester to photograph its latest collection.

First-year fashion-promotion students were entrusted with the Dr Martens autumn/winter collection and given the brief to find the most original, outrageous or unique ways to wear a British classic.

The best images were uploaded for the world to see via the Dr Martens Facebook page and there will be an exhibition of the students' work in UCA Rochester's Zandra Rhodes Gallery from January 2013.

UCA fashion lecturer Johannes Reponen said: "This was a fantastic opportunity for our first-year students to test their skills in styling and teamwork in a live industry project with a major British brand. Not many fashion courses can boast that experience in their first semester."

Students had to source their own models, formulate styling concepts and then execute them on location and in the studio.

Dr Martens provided the students with a selection of men's and women's boots, as well as a range of clothing.

Students got just 15 minutes in the studio and 15 minutes on-location to create bold and exciting ways to wear the boots.

Awards success for property-developer

MAIDSTONE developer Hillreed Homes, now part of the Persimmon Group, scooped two prestigious awards at the annual What House? Awards held at The Grosvenor House Hotel in Park Lane, London.

The bronze awards were for Best Medium House Builder and Best Development – given for the project at Green Way, Kings Hill.

The What House? Awards, now in their 31st year, are the most prestigious and longest-established new-homes awards, recognising the skills of house-builders and developers across the country.

"This is fabulous news for Hillreed Homes and Persimmon," said Jo Richards, marketing and corporate manager at Hillreed Homes.

"We have received many industry accolades over the years which are testament to the company's dedication to the quality of build.

"Equally important is the benefit it gives to our buyers, who know they can feel safe in their choice of property investment.

"To win two major awards underpins what a good decision it was to purchase Hillreed Homes and retain the Hillreed brand as it is so well recognised and valued in the South East region," added Darren Jones, managing director of Persimmon Homes South East.

"We are delighted to be the recipients of these two fine awards"

Join campaign to put boarded-up buildings to good use as homes

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

BOARDED Up Britain, a website aimed at documenting all of the boarded-up buildings in the country, has now been launched and members of the public are being encouraged to upload details of derelict buildings in their area in the hope that something will be done.

The scheme was founded by affordable-property-developer FreshStart Living, which wants to highlight the UK's boarded-up buildings so they can be transformed into homes.

Some research suggests that unless 330,000 homes are built a year, the UK will fail to deal with a claimed backlog of two million few homes.

Last year 390,000 new households formed – yet only 114,000 new homes were built. FreshStart Living believes the answer lies within the UK's existing boarded-up buildings, which can be transformed quickly and cost-effectively into affordable properties.

Matthew Dyas, Boarded Up Britain coordinator said: "No matter where you look nowadays you'll find an empty building... homes, pubs, warehouses and mills abandoned and left to rot. You can't even escape it on the high street, with more than one in 10 shops now lying vacant.

"We want to draw attention to these buildings and put an end to Boarded Up Britain, but we need the public's help to do it. If you're sick of that derelict building at the end of your street,

USE IT! The website aims to see derelict buildings transformed into habitable properties to help combat the claimed housing shortage upload it to the website and let's try and do something about it.

"Through Boarded Up Britain we want to collect information on all the derelict buildings across Britain so we can find out who owns them and put pressure on them to do something about it. We want to take a use-it-or-lose-it stance – why have a building sat there when it could be transformed into something that would be more useful, such as affordable housing or even a community centre?"

Charlie Cunningham, CEO of FreshStart Living, said: "We think Boarded Up Britain is a fantastic idea and we pledge to add all of our pipeline developments to the site so residents can keep updated on the building in their area.

"When we go looking at new sites and developments we often get residents coming up to us and saying 'It's about time you're doing something with this building' and I have to explain that we aren't the owners.

"Boarded Up Britain will help to solve this problem by allowing people to find out more about the derelict buildings in their area.

"What's more, it will also help them to raise awareness of buildings that have been sat there unused for years and show the current building-owners that residents are sick of being surrounded by these derelict buildings and they want something done about it."

TOYOTA'S Corolla is one of the most successful car models in the world – the foundation of the Japanese number one's climb to virtual world domination.

Its hallmarks have been great practicality and reliability, words that proved to be the Corolla's death knell in the British and European markets, where panache and verve also need to be in the mix.

Toyota's answer? A European Corolla replacement in 2007, known as the Auris – a name that suggested this was the new gold standard in family hatchbacks.

Except it felt like a Corolla all over again. An all-new Auris arrives shortly, though – priced from £14,495 – and could be a real divergence from the Corolla blueprint at last but again built in the UK at Toyota's Derbyshire plant.

The most obvious change is sharp styling, notably at the front, which is tipped to become Toyota's new corporate look and makes the car look lower and wider.

The former is certainly true: it rides 10mm lower than the old car, but Toyota has also lopped 55mm off the total height.

It looks racier, too, with a steeply-raked windscreen and side windows stretching closer to the rear, the low-slung look emphasised by a high waist and blacked-out centre and rear pillars, yet the tape measure says the car is just 30mm longer than before.

Toyota claims the new car delivers its traditional quality, durability and reliability plus more desirable design and driver rewards.

The interior looks to have had a serious rethink, too: Toyota will be all too aware that those ambitious Koreans, Kia and Hyundai, have put pressure on here with the latest Ceed and i30 models respectively.

So the new Auris offers greater adjustment on the front seat and the steering-wheel position.

There's also more boot space – 360 litres with rear seats in place – and that goes for the hybrid version, too, as the batteries are now tucked beneath the rear seats rather than intruding into the boot. And loading is easier with a 90mm wider tailgate opening and dual-level adjustable deckboard.

As the superb new GT86 sports coupé proves, Toyota has also snapped out of its obsession with hybrids for long enough to see that the brand must also offer something for those who still want to enjoy their driving, so the new Auris is also touted as more of a driver's car.

The lower profile helps and the chassis has been tuned for better response and ride comfort, with the electric power-steering designed to deliver quick feedback.

Ecologically, average CO2 emissions for the whole range are 13 per cent lower than before at 109g/km, with the petrol electric and 1.4-litre diesel versions both escaping road tax altogether by limboing beneath the 100g/km benchmark

Toyota aims for gold standard in hatchback sector with Auris

COMING SOON: This classy-looking and roomy estate, the Auris Touring Sports, will join Toyota's hatchback version when it arrives next year, adding even more choice for UK car-buyers

/// DON'T LIKE ///

... how we've had to wait a model generation for something that apparently now really does distance the Auris from the traditional Corolla.

/// NOT SURE ///

... buyers will be convinced immediately there is a genuinely new and more exciting Toyota answer to the established Focus, Golf and Astra.

/// REALLY LIKE ///

... how Toyota does seem to have raised its game with newer models that appeal to the senses as much as good sense on the eco front.

B-Class shows that Mercedes has finally got a sensible MPV

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MERCEDES-BENZ went a bit mad on small MPVs.

In 2005, you had a choice of three: the A-Class, the B-Class and the unfortunately-named Vaneo – no prizes for guessing what that one looked like.

But the German premium marque realised this was too much of a bad thing and got sensible.

The A-Class has since morphed into a natty little sporting hatchback; the Vaneo has disappeared – hopefully never to return – and the B-Class now shoulders the small MPV burden alone.

Not that M-B deigns to use the MPV label; the B-Class is a 'compact sports tourer', mate, a description that suits the current car more than its rather more upright predecessor, gaining more handling panache while retaining much of the space and versatility.

The old car was a barge to drive and, while the latest car is still no sports machine, it looks the part with its comparatively low-slung profile and sharp styling, highlighted by sharp creases on the flanks.

It's not cheap, of course, priced from £21,295, but the car's quality, technology and safety stood out when it arrived earlier this year.

Mercs have always been at the top for looking after occupants at crunch time, but families will particularly like the standard-fit radar-based collision-warning system.

This weights up the brakes in anticipation if it detects that the car is too close to the vehicle in front, while a panel light alerts the possibly-distracted driver.

The cabin is airy with excellent headroom and fold-flat rear seats for maximum cargo capacity, while four equipment packages are offered for owner customisation: Chrome, Sports, Exclusive and Night – it's a far sexier proposition than last time around.

Practical-car-buyers are also usually people

SMALL BUT PERFECTLY FORMED:

Mercedes has put all its MPV eggs in one basket with the now-improved B-Class that comes with a host of hi-tech gadgets and plenty of room with an eye on ecology and economy and the B-Class won't disappoint here, either, with all-new low-emission, green powertrains including stop/start for added economy in congested conditions.

There's a new direct-injection turbocharged four-cylinder petrol-engine series, new diesel, six-speed manual gearboxes as standard and even a VW-style dual clutch seven-speed transmission allowing the car to be driven as an auto or manual. All wear M-B's eco-friendly Blue-Efficiency branding.

The test car was a flagship B200 CDI in smart Sport trim, this one in bright red with two-tone alloys and low-profile tyres – a real eye-catcher, even if those wheels did little to improve the slightly-nervous ride quality.

Our car also seemed to have an especially-sensitive throttle; given that the 132bhp 1.8-litre diesel has lots of low-down urge, I found it a bit too easy to spin the wheels when pulling away on a greasy or loose surface.

But it's a quiet and smooth engine and the auto-box changes are seamless and impressive, and flexible enough to be changed manually via steering-wheel paddles.

However, the unit adds £1,450 to the price of its manual equivalent. Some of that extra can be clawed back, though, by significantly-better fuel consumption against the manual; the official combined total is 67.3mpg versus 64.2 – but both options are impressive for this class.

The interior is classy and, while the test car had the optional £1,055 Exclusive upgrade – leather seats, high-gloss black-ash facia, heated front seats and other trimmings – the standard-fit Artico artificial leather looks as good and will probably last better.

We had to wait a generation, but M-B got the B-Class right this time; few MPVs manage to hit the button from a driver-enjoyment point of view, but this car is not so far off the mark and gives premium-car-buyers a seriously-practical and good-looking option.

MX-5 legend gets new face

MAZDA has given its MX-5 sports-car icon (from £18,495) a fresh face, including a new pedestrian-friendly pop-up bonnet, due to appear on other Mazdas and in anticipation of tough new EU legislation.

The car's famous handling prowess has also been tweaked and the new seven-strong line-up introduces the 2.0-litre MX-5 Sport Tech Nav models, with integrated TomTom sat-nav.

CR-V caps SUV sales increase

HONDA'S new fourth-generation CR-V SUV has had a sales boost from a respected independent source; valuation experts at CAP Monitor say the £30,995 2.2-litre diesel EX flagship will be worth 40 per cent of its original price after three years/60,000 miles.

This beats the sector average, with key factors being specification, modern looks, interior refinement, driving dynamics and economy.

Multiplication in 4x4 values

MAJOR auction chain BCA says 4x4 values rose sharply in October, climbing 16 per cent as the first signs of winter appeared.

And with long-range forecasters suggesting the UK is in for a colder-than-average winter, values for this sector and mud-bashing, snow-beating models like the Land Rover Freelander, pictured, could soar even higher, according to BCA.

Peugeot arrives at Motorline

By Steve Loader
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MOTORLINE – the Kent and Sussex family-owned dealer group – is adding Peugeot to its portfolio of brands.

The French marque joins a line-up already including Volkswagen, Toyota, Lexus, Renault, Skoda, Nissan and Hyundai across sites stretching from Canterbury Motor Company in the east to Gatwick and Horsham in the west.

Motorline has added the Peugeot name by leasing the former Canterbury Motor Company site at Rhodaus Town in the city.

More recently, this has operated as a Robins &

Day outlet – Peugeot's in-house dealership chain – but the manufacturer has made overtures for several years about Motorline applying its much-admired retail skills to the Canterbury franchise.

The group has now promoted experienced dealer principal Robert Hendry to the position of brand manager and he will head the first Peugeot acquisition.

Rob, who ran Motorline's Toyota site at Ashford's Orbital Park for four years, said: "This is a feather in our cap, to be courted by a major marque like Peugeot, and I'm really looking forward to the challenge."

"Peugeot has some excellent new products, notably the 208 supermini – which arrived in the summer of 2012 – and a versatile range of diesel-electric hybrids, plus a brilliant sporting halo car in the RCZ.

"We've also got the 208 GTi to look forward to next year, which really will evoke memories of the legendary 205GTi.

"But, apart from taking on the brand itself, we have another challenge – the search for a new site. Rhodaus Town is an ageing premises and we really want a new and modern motor dealership that can be given Peugeot's trademark 'Blue Box' treatment. We hope to have that in early 2013."

The Motorline group employs some 5,500 people, including more than 50 at its Canterbury head office.

NEW: Rob Hendry, brand manager for Motorline's Peugeot range, is excited by the chance to sell models such as the Hybrid 508RXH, left, and RCZ

Fixtures reveal ‘decent spread’ of summer games for county

KENT fans can start planning their summer after the club released its fixture list.

Highlights include the Tunbridge Wells Festival, the 162nd Canterbury Cricket Week in late August, and a potential tie against New Zealand in June which will be cancelled should the Kiwis reach the ICC Trophy final.

Chief executive Jamie Clifford said: “It is pleasing to see a decent spread of cricket through the summer months of June, July and August, with a good mix of cricket at key times – Friday nights, Sunday afternoons for the whole family, as well as plenty of mid-week championship cricket.”

Wind and rain can't dampen final race of historic year at Brands Hatch

THE final race of Brands Hatch's season went into the darkness last weekend.

The Britcar Production Cup night race was plagued by persistent rain and high winds which added to the drama of a 90 minute race at the famous circuit. It ends an historic year at the West Kingsdown track, which has hosted the road cycling for the Paralympics, rounds of the British Touring Car Championships, and the dramatic British Superbike Championships.

Search for new investors off to a promising start as club looks to the future

By Greg Miles
greg.miles@archant.co.uk

MARGATE director Keith Piper has admitted there is early interest from outside parties looking to become involved in the club.

Piper made it known last month that he was looking to relinquish part of his control in the club after 25 years.

He's looking for 'new blood' to help Gate as they set about a fresh chapter in their history with the development of a new Football League standard ground on the horizon.

"I have been talking to two or three different parties," he said. "There's some interest there. No doubt those discussions will go on for a few weeks yet. We will just have to see how it comes out for us.

"To bring a group of people together they have to be like-minded. They have got to be able to work together; you cannot have rows and arguments.

"Two of them were phone calls and I contacted the other personally. They are someone who had been interested previously but I didn't feel we were in a position to relinquish control at the time.

"I would say though that they won't be riding into Margate on camels from the Middle East."

Piper was keen to stress he wouldn't be walking away completely, but would look to introduce new directors once work had started, or was completed on the new stadium.

That project could get underway in January after several spanners have been thrown

INTEREST: There have been discussions about new investment to ensure the future of the club in the works in the last few months.

Travelodge, which will build a new hotel on the site as part of the project, faced an uncertain financial future but appear set to continue in the development. And in the last month the club's main sponsor, and contractor for the development, Construct Stadia, went bust, but there is plenty of interest from firms to take on the £8 million deal.

"There's no question of me walking away completely," said Piper. "It's a case of wanting to put new people in place for the next 25 years. It would be nice to see some of the young business types come forward and show an interest."

Fellow Kent clubs Dartford, and Maidstone are perfect examples, although at different stages of their growth, of how a new stadium can invigorate a club. Dartford moved into the Princes Park development in 2006 while a Ryman League club, now they're riding high in the Blue Square Premier.

Ryman One South side Maidstone moved into the Gallagher Stadium in the summer after a 24-year exile from the town. They have seen huge gates so far this season.

"Maidstone were a large club," he said. "It's wonderful to see 1,500 supporters at their home games, it's brilliant.

"When we were in the Conference we had an average of 1,730. It shows there's support here for football at this level. There's a proven support basis here."

BOXING

Coach wins Hall of Fame glory while on time out from the power station

Lee Pullen has had a year to remember with his involvement in the Olympics, he talks to Greg Miles about his rise to the top

AS far as work sabbaticals go Lee Pullen's isn't going too badly.

In the summer the Great Britain boxing coach had a hand in Nicola Adams becoming the first female boxing Olympic gold medalist.

Last week he was inducted into the Sports Coach UK's Hall of Fame – joining the likes of Sir Alex Ferguson – following his involvement in GB's boxing success.

And this week he's been able to put another feather in his cap as star pupil Adams made the shortlist for the Sports Personality of the Year award (SPOTY).

Pullen joined the Olympic boxing programme full-time two years ago having worked part time for the last ten. It meant he had to take a sabbatical from his day job making sure things run smoothly at Dungeness Power Station.

The former Folkestone boxing club coach continues to be grateful for their support, in particular that of station director Martin Pearson, which has culminated in quite a year for the 54-year-old.

"I want to say a big thank you to him," he said. "He's allowed me to take this opportunity."

"I'm on a sabbatical from work at the power station to follow my coaching dreams. Without their support I couldn't have done it."

Without doing himself out of a job, he said he's unsure when he will return to work as sights are now firmly set on the Rio.

He said he had a feeling something might be on the cards last week when he was told to go to the awards ceremony at the Lancaster Hotel in London for the UK coaching awards.

"I was told I would have to go, so I had a sneaky feeling something would come up. It was great to get an award," he said.

"I'm a bit humbled by it to be honest, especially if you look at the past people who have been inducted, people like Sir Alex Ferguson. "It makes everything worth while because it's been a long hard slog at times."

SUCCESS:

Lee Pullen works with Olympic medal winner Nicola Adams

It was also a surprise to hear of Adams' nomination for the SPOTY – a shortlist which last year didn't include a woman.

The 30-year-old from Leeds is one of 11 Olympians on the list of 12. She beat Chinese favourite Ren Cancan to become the first female boxing gold medalist.

"She's fantastic," said Pullen. "She's a great ambassador for boxing. She's superb to work with."

"It's brilliant that she's on the list, I'm really pleased for her. She's up against some stiff competition. I'm only a small cog in the machine. She does all the work. Once the bell goes I get out."

There has been no respite since the summer as Pullen has been heavily involved in a new franchise called World Series Boxing which takes him all over the globe.

It includes a change to the rules of amateur boxing. Instead of three rounds of three minutes, there are five rounds, and the competitors don't wear headguards.

National teams of boxers, like the English Lionhearts go head-to-head with other nations to be crowned world champions.

"I thought there would be a bit of a lull after the Games, but it's not quite been like that at all," he said.

"It's been quite a busy time. We can't rest on our laurels. We have got development squads to look at for Rio. If you're funded for the next Olympic cycle, you have got to do a business plan."

ADDITION: Nicky Forster has signed Ademola while Smith leaves

Spitfires' winger flies in to boost Athletic attack

DOVER have signed winger Moses Ademola from Eastleigh Spitfires for an undisclosed fee.

The 23-year-old can play out wide or in attack and won the title with Woking last season. He left them in the summer after three years at Kingfield to sign for Eastleigh.

This season Ademola has scored seven goals in 15 league appearances for the Spitfires. He follows Daryl McMahon in making the switch from Eastleigh to Crabbie.

Having started his career at Cray Wanderers and Croydon

Athletic, he became a full-time professional at Brentford.

During his two-year spell with the Bees, he enjoyed a loan spell at Woking and the Cards signed him in 2010.

After two and a half seasons at Kingfield, he was part of their title winning team in Blue Square Bet South last season.

There was also one to leave Crabbie this week as winger Jamie Smith departed for Blue Square South rivals Eastbourne Borough. The former Brighton player signed in the summer following a trial.

INTEREST: The new club was inspired by Medway's success

RUGBY LEAGUE

Wheelchair club opens second branch on coast

INTEREST in rugby league continues to grow in the county, especially in Folkestone, where a wheelchair version of the sport has been launched.

On the back of the success of the wheelchair rugby league club run by the Medway Dragons team in Gillingham, the Folkestone Spitfires has been set up.

The game adopts the same rules as the running version of the sport, but is played in wheelchairs and is open to both able-bodied, and disabled participants.

The club, based out of the Pent Valley Leisure Centre, was the brain child of Mel Sharpe whose son Travis first took up the sport at Medway Dragons two years ago. Training takes place from 2-4pm on Sundays.

For more information contact Kent community rugby league coach Mark Roughsedge on email kentrf@live.co.uk or visit the Spitfires' website www.pitchero.com/clubs/folkestonespitfires or the Dragons site: www.pitchero.com/clubs/medwaydragons.

SO WHO HAS YOUR VOTE FOR BBC SPORTS PERSONALITY OF THE YEAR?

THE shortlist for the awards is made up of 12 names, with the winner to be decided by a public vote on the night of a glitzy ceremony on December 16.

Eleven nominees won gold medals this summer in the Olympics and Paralympics, among other achievements.

The odd one out is golfer Rory McIlroy who won the US PGA title and the season-ending World Tour Championship. He was also a part of Europe's winning Ryder Cup team.
